PORTLAND, July 19, 1898.

The British Bark Pearhyn Castle cleared yesterday for New London, Africa, wheat laden. The Pearhyn Castle will be remembered as the bark that was towed up from San Francisco to save the ship.

The Inman Paulson Company seem to consider the voyage of their raft to San Francisco a success, as they have the frame work of another already in the water and a good part of the lumber that is to comprise their second raft sawed and piled on the dock.

Work on the new custom house is progressing slowly and no effort is being made to secure the passage of an ordinance permitting the laying of a railroad track to the grounds to enable the contracting to get on stone and building material at the least expenditure of time and money.

The people of Portland are perplexed and puzzled: No one knows exactly "where he is at." It all comes over the curious maneuvers of the new city administration. No sooner was it inaugurated than Larry Sullivan, ward-heeler of the dominant forces opens an all night dance house in a building owned by State Senator Joseph Simon, who is regarded as the great factotum behind the municipal throne.
