Telegrams Indicate the Wilson Avenue Location Chosen.

Secretary of the Treasury Approves Inspector Garretson's Action in the Matter.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The secretary of the treasury today approved the recommendation of Inspector Garretson, of the supervising architect's office, that the site for the public building at Salem, Or., lying between the court house and the city hall, be purchased, it being the most desirable of all the lots offered, and favored by the city council. The exact location of the lot, the owner and price asked could not be learned today.

Above telegram appears in the Associated Press dispatch as printed at Portland.

The telegram is not perfectly clear but is taken at Salem, both by the officials and private citizens to mean that the Wilson Avenue site offered by the City of Salem and the Wilson heirs has been chosen.

Improving Waterways.

Captain W. W. Harts, who has charge of the river and harbor work in Oregon, has finished inspecting the contracts and bonds handed in by the contractors for work to be done at Coos bay, and on the Siuslaw and Coquille rivers, and they have been forwarded to Washington for approval, and as soon as they are returned work will begin at the three places named. Those contracts were all awarded to Portland contractors. Wakefield & Jacobson got the Coos bay work, which amounts to about $140,000; John Kiernan gets the Coquille work, which will foot up something like $35,000, and Hale & Smith do the $25,000 job contemplated along the Siuslaw.

Captain Harts is now at work on a new map of Yaquina bay. The recently ordered surveys and soundings of that bay have been completed, and as soon as the new map is finished, it is probable that of the board appointed to determine if further improvements were advisable at the month of the bay, will hold a meeting. This will be about two weeks, and the members of the board expect to be able to make a full report after that meeting.

So far the changes found in the bay since the survey in 1885, show that the work done there has not been in vain. A slight increase of depth is shown, and the channel is also straighter than it was when the last survey was made. This would indicate that the jetties are slowly accomplishing the work for which they were constructed.

The work at Yaquina bay was begun in 1881, and is the pioneer harbor improvement of that kind done on the coast. Since the first work was done, the channel has increased in depth from seven to 14 feet, which is said to be a good showing.

Before any further work can be done however, nearly a quarter of a million will have to be expended repairing and replacing the old apparatus, which is practically worthless.

Captain Adams.

The latest report from Captain Adams is that he lies in about the same condition, without much suffering. He is affected with aneurism, or a diseased condition of an artery, and it is considered that there is no hope of his recovery.

Friends Quarterly Meeting.

Miss Starr's Tragic Death Raises a Question.

The Circumstances Attending Her Death Nearly All Point to an Accident.

Some further particulars of the tragic death of Miss Sarah Starr, Thursday afternoon from the effects of corrosive sublimate, not carbolic acid as heretofore stated, have been gleaned by THE JOURNAL.

The young lady reached home shortly after twelve as stated. Nearly all the members of the family were at home and preparations for dinner were under way.

Miss Sarah went to the pantry and rummaged among some bottles on the shelf there. Selecting the bottle of corrosive sublimate she held it up and asked her mother, "Mama, what is this?"

Her mother answered, "That is rank poison; put it up."

She then commenced shaking the bottle and walked over and seated herself by the stove with the bottle in her hand. In a few moments, while the others were not observing her, she suddenly screamed, and it was seen that the bottle was uncorked and some of its contents were on her cheek.

She sprang up and dashed the bottle upon the floor, breaking it, and cried to the others to send for a doctor.

She was able to talk for a few minutes, and urged the others to hurry and do something for her and when the doctor arrived she asked him if he could save her.

It was soon found impossible to save her, and before she lapsed into unconsciousness she knew that she must die. The family were paralyzed by the suddenness of the awful occurrence.

SKETCH OF MISS STARR.

Miss Starr was a member of the Congregational church, and she held the respect and high esteem of all with whom she was brought in contact.

After graduation from the Salem public schools, she took a course of shorthand and typewriting at the business college here and then acted as stenographer in the law office of Sherman, Condit and Park for two years.

She is very highly spoken of by these gentlemen, as a bright and extremely sensible young lady, cheerful and pleasant, taking a wholesome view of life and always having definite objects in view.

She has three older sisters who are school teachers, two younger sisters and three younger brothers, and it has been the custom in the family for the older children, as they became able to earn money, to help the younger ones to an education. Miss Sarah was helped in this way and her first earnings were applied to the repayment. Then she helped her younger brother through the Salem business college, from which he recently graduated.

She has also helped her parents, as her father has been an invalid for over a year and unable to do any work.

As an illustration of the young lady's sensible and business-like turn of mind and her consideration for her family, it is stated by one who several times talked with her on subject, that she fully intended to take some kind of life insurance in favor of her parents as soon as her finances would permit.

WAS IT SUICIDE?

THE SUICIDE THEORY.

Some have come to the conclusion that the young lady must have taken the poison with suicidal intent, but careful investigation fails to disclose any admission or evidence from her conduct to support that theory.

THE ONLY AUNT MEMBER OF THE FAMILY, a younger brother, James, who was at Oregon City, seeking employment. He was sent for at once and is now at home.

The funeral services will be held at the Congregational church at 10 a. m. Saturday conducted by Rev. P. S. Knight and interment will be at the City View Cemetery.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The report that an heir or an heiress is expected in the family of the Prince and Princess of Naples is being received by the Italian people with characteristic outbursts of emotion, the loyalists displaying the wildest joy, the opponents of the dynasty still concealing their disappointment, while in all quarters and among all classes the deepest interest is manifested. Despite the belief that has prevailed heretofore that the Prince of Naples would never supply a direct heir to the throne of King Humbert, the present rumor is generally credited and the official announcement is expected early in September.

There are certain members of the royal family, however, to whom the news of the expected visit of the stock to the household of Victor Emmanuel is as gall and wormwood. To the duchess of Anza is the rumor particularly disagreeable. Last October the duchess gave birth to a son who will in all probability be king of Italy should the Prince of Naples have no male issue. The duke of Anza is the next heir to the throne after the Prince of Naples, and his son, of course, inherits his rights.

A London dispatch says that among the passengers on the Dominion line steamer sailing from Liverpool today are a number of prominent English jurists and barristers who are to attend the sessions of the American Bar Association and International Law Association at Buffalo. Among the number are Sir William Kennedy, Judge of the Supreme Court, Mr. Thomas Gilbert Carver and Mr. Joseph Walton.

Women whose object is to reform the dress of their sex opened a convention at Lake Bluff, Ill., today, and during the coming week reform attire for women will be discussed in all its phases. In connection with the convention there is held a comprehensive exhibit of hygienic clothing.

At the Chicago headquarters of the Department of the Lakes, bids were opened today by Major George B. Davis, purchasing commissary of the United States army, for several hundred tons of subsistence supplies, the most of which is intended for shipment to the forces in the Philippines. The largest items are beans and salt.
