RELIGIOUS THOUGHT

From Our Exchanges.

We simply call attention to the fact that this "peace of justice," quick to avenge insults, which makes a strong nation at once the judge and jury and executioner in its own suit, and spends more on the machinery of military force than on all measures for which Christmas day is set to remind us. Jesus' method, his spirit, his teaching, are utterly different. The Christmas peace is the peace of the men of goodwill. The method is trust; the spirit is humanity. Good will carries justice with it.

It is important to make this distinction. Millions of people do not see how great it is. They still worship force. They confuse the simple life of the Man of Nazareth with external power and material pomp. They look back and worship a sort of war-lord, coming in the skies to punish his enemies. They have not yet learned that good will is the mightiest force in the universe. They have yet to trust this new force and to apply it to every kind of problem. They had better not reverence Jesus at all, if they miss the kernel of his teaching. Do they imagine that if he were addressing the American people, he would bid them build more fighting ships.—Charles F. Done, The Christian Register.

In the effort to attain theological sanity religious teachers have often passed in the cold real of a barren intellectualism. The inference is perhaps natural that liberal theology implies decay of spiritual passion; but there is nothing in the nature of things to make this disaster inevitable. The whole question is largely one of emphasis. I cannot admit that it is necessary to close one's to all the splendid and reverent work of our greatest Biblical critics in order to retain a vision of the cross of Christ. There may be two Isaiahs or twenty; what has that to do with me, so long as I have the profound spiritual message contained in the book which bears the name of Isaiah? I am indifferent as to whether Bacon or Shakespeare wrote Hamlet, so long as I have Hamlet; and who would insist that a certain critical view of the authorship of Hamlet is imperative before one could be allowed to expound the teachings of the drama? The critic does his work, well or ill as the case may be; I may accept or reject his views, but the message of the book is still mine.—Rev. J. W. Dawson, The Congregationalist.

The greatest object to religious achievement today is not the deplorable apathy—that can be overcome by a genuine religious enthusiasm; nor higher criticism—that can be corrected by the truth of the Bible; nor the growing spirit of worldliness—the spirit of the master is more than a match for that, but the atrabilious jeremiahs and the disconcerting lamentations of doubtful Christians without the heart or hope, without faith or force!—E. M. Martinson, The Standard.

Is the "Religion of an Educated Man" a peculiar brand of salvation for collegians? Can the "Religion of a Mature Man" improve upon the sweet simplicity and childlike faith taught in the gospels? Is there a new edition of the gospel since Jesus said "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven?"—Pacific Christian Advocate.

The richest gifts of God are of a spiritual character, and have come through Christ, and they draw from us the highest expression of our gratitude in the words of our lips, the excellence of our lives, and the graciousness of our deeds.—The Watchman.

Lebanon Bank Robbery. Judge Cameron moved the court for a new trial on the ground that the court failed to instruct the jury in reference to the character of the larceny, that the district attorney called the witnesses saloon hummers, vile perjurers, etc., that instructions were given by request of the attorneys, for errors of law, but principally for insufficiency of evidence, specified by the attorney. The motion was overruled and the defendants were sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary, where they will be taken this afternoon by Sheriff White.

The defendants were given 30 days to file a bill of exceptions. The attorneys for the defendants asked that an order be made for the turning over of the $500 certificate of deposit and $300 in currency found on LOVNEVHA HOVIVJ Defendant Crossley to Lawyer Ditchburn, holding an order from the defendant, now in the possession of the district attorney. The deputy stated that P. M. Seroggins & Co., and the Security also both claimed it. The court declined to act at the present time, denying authority over the district attorney in the matter.—Albany Democrat. Sheriff White and Deputy W. H. Warner brought Dunn and Crossley to the penitentiary last evening.

Good Hint for Others.

A La Grande Citizen says: "One of the greatest things that La Grande ever did for itself was the establishment at the railroad station, in a glass about 60 feet long, an exhibit of our products. Hundreds of travelers get off the trains every day and inspect this exhibit. Many of them come back again and spend a few days, take trips into the country and make investments in land or town lots or business sites. This exhibit is lighted at night by electric lamps, and is always there a silent exponent of what Union county can do."

Supreme Court.

The case of Sam Castro vs. Emma Murray, et al., argued on a motion to reform the records of the lower court was denied. On motion to dismiss the appeal in the case of Multnomah county vs. First National Bank of Portland, the court ordered that the motion be continued until the cause comes on for hearing on its merits, when both will be heard together.

Attacked by a Mob

and beaten, in a labor riot, until covered with sores, a Chicago street car conductor applied Bucklin's Arnica Salve, and was soon sound and well. "I used it in my family," writes G. J. Welch, of Tekonsha, Mich., "and find it perfect." Simply great for cuts and buras. Only 25c at J. C. Perry's drug store.
