MERCURY SULPHIDE IN OREGON

Rich Vein of Quicksilver Struck in the Okecho District.

One of the richest mineral strikes in the history of Crook county was made a few days ago in the upper tunnel of the Alamedan property on Look-out mountain. About 150 feet from the tunnel the miners encountered a vein which was crossed for a short distance, when stoping was commenced. The overhead work was continued for a distance of thirty-five feet, the vein matter continuing to increase in size until the work was stopped in order to begin timbering. The wall is almost a solid face of cinnabar, the vein matter running from two to three feet in width carrying ore which will run about 55 per cent of mercury. From present indications it is taken that the stoping when continued will lead into an immense body of the mineral, as there are no visible signs of the vein matter being pinched out by the walls. This, together with the fact that many smaller veins and stringers have been repeatedly cut during the progress of the tunnel work lead those in charge to believe that they are not far from an immense deposit of the mineral. The vein matter now being taken out, however, is of the richest quality and large quantities of it will be ready for the furnace as soon as the latter is fired again.

The new boiler for the dryer will be shipped from Portland this week, and it is expected that it will be in place and ready to supply steam for drying the ore inside of a couple of weeks. The management is anxious to get in a month's run before the heavy snow compels them to close down for the winter and work in consequence will be pushed ahead as rapidly as possible.
