Forty-eight years ago great men were arising to meet, master and overcome he varied and vexed problems of national, state and local import. The ex-gencies of those days called for the services of many brainy men. At the time written of, Lincoln and Greeley were deeply intrenched in the public mind, and no publication more faithfully portrayed and illustrated the now historical events than Frank Leslie's

During the weeks of 1906 just passed, Leslie's Weekly has reproduced from the valuable old files a number of interesting illustrations and articles depicting the stirring events connected with this important period in our earlier history. In the current issue of the Weekly a noteworthy reference was made to Frank Leslie's personal work as'it was carried on by him in the summer of 1858 in his strenuous crusade against impure and distillery milk, on which evil some cities are just begin-

Frank Leslie was threatened many times with death and annihilation in many forms, and his artists and reporters, and himself, even, were attacked on several occasions by male stable attendants referred to in Lealie's vigor-us articles as " Hibernian Milkmalds."

In this day and age we keenly appreciate the vital importance of pure food, and particularly a pure milk supply, as bread and milk are the most important articles of food. Too much credit for th- benefits we enjoy in this respect cannot be given to Leslie for his effective work, which, so well begun by him, has been carried on all these years by his contemporaneous worker-the originator and inventor of condensed milk, Gail Borden by name-

This great humanitarian achieved marvelous results in the saving of hosts of children's lives, and in promoting the general health of New Yorkers by the sale of his condensed milk, produced under his scientific dairy regulations.

Fortunately, and almost providentially he was ready to supply the demand in 1858 for pure milk at a time when Les-
