X-RAYS

How fleeting is glory! Alice Roosevelt Langworth isn't down high now to William Jennings Bryan.

"A dinner with herbs" will soon become fashionable, under Secretary Wilson's ruling. He should be fed on diseased meat until he changed his ruling.

Walter Wellman has gone to Northern Norway, and will attempt to reach the north pole in a balloon. Some good is bound to result, for if he fails to find the pole, we may lose Wellman.

Government inspection of packing houses if so supposed will cost $3,000,000 a year. A couple of packers choiced in the pen for a year or two would cut off this graft for government pap suckers, and the meat would be clean.

Wilson says much must be left to the discretion of the inspectors. This is a good thing for the packers, a ray of light through their gloom—also a good thing for a really discreet inspector. To be plain, it is a magnificent plan for the encouragement of lechery.

Roosevelt's statement that America would guarantee all canned meats bearing government stamp, does not fit Secretary Wilson's statement that tuberculosis beef can be sold "if the rotten parts are cut out." This is appa-

ANOTHER JOB LOT OF RAILROADS

Executive Head of the Pipe
Dreams Confesses That He Has Strong Backing

The Oregon Coast & Eastern Railway Company will build a line from Portland to Eugene to give a direct route to the East. Preliminary work of the company has reached a stage where its plans are becoming apparent. W. J. Wisley, executive head of the company in Oregon, today officially admitted that plans are being perfected for a valley route, via McMinnville or some nearby point.

A large meeting of citizens at McMinnville last evening was attended by Mr. Wisley, who made a statement of what the company is ready to do in exchange for a right of way. Mayor Mason presided, and leading citizens manifested a lively interest in the project. A delegation from Sheridan was in attendance, and was enthusiastic for the railroad proposition. Committees were appointed to take up right of way matters with the Oregon Coast & Eastern Company.

Protects the People.

It was brought out that Mr. Wisley has not troubled on any of the franchisees that have been secured by him in the two years he has been working on the Oregon Coast & Eastern project, and that every right of way contract is placed in escrow in the Security Savings and Trust Bank, of Portland, to be cancelled and returned to the people in event that the railroad is not built according to contract.

The company has placed three surveying parties in the field, under well-known engineers, to locate the routes of the road in the valley and along the coast. From the movements of these parties it appears that the road will be built from Portland to Tillamook, via Wilson river, and south via Toledo to Coos Bay and Eureka. The line will run east through Eugene and over the Cascade mountains to a connection with some transcontinental line, the name of which is not yet divulged.

The valley line will diverge from the Tillamook line at some point west of Portland, and extend south through or near McMinnville, and on to Eugene, probably via Corvallis.

Surveyors at Work.

The Tillamook route is being surveyed by a party under Engineer Ralph Hunt. The survey is completed through the most difficult portion of the route. It shows that, contrary to published statements from a local railroad man, there is a good route with a maximum grade of 1 1/2 per cent through the Wilson river gorge, and over the summit of the Coast range. The pass is but 1325 feet elevation.

Engineer D. L. Campbell, with a party of engineers, is surveying the route from Toledo. South from that point the line is being surveyed by a party under the direction of Engineer Steel. Everywhere they are said to be securing a route of easy grades and curves. The Wilson river line will have much heavy work, and a portion of it will cost $50,000 per mile.

Work Going Steadily On.

In spite of frequent criticism and abuse that has been directed against the Oregon Coast & Eastern undertaking by two or three newspapers, the work of securing rights of way and completing surveys is going steadily on. It is said, and the company will, within a few months, be ready to commence construction. Entrance to Portland will soon be up for consideration, and the men behind the project say they are confident they will receive not only fair but liberal treatment at the hands of that city.

The Burros Drowned.

Some time ago the insular bureau of the war department embarked upon the experiment of sending into the Philippines a few American donkeys, known as "burros," for use among the Spanish-speaking people. Many advices from the islands now state that seven, or about half the consignment, were drowned in the torrid rains of the wet season, the animals being caught out in the open, and, not knowing how to shelter themselves, like the native beast of burden. The natives, who were a little afraid of the animals, declared that the burros had been drowned because they did not have sense enough to come in out of the rain.

A NEW VARIETY OF TROUT

Named After Roosevelt to Indicate Its Qualities as a Game Fighter

"A newly discovered Pacific coast fish has been named after President Roosevelt, not by its proud, patriotic and presumably, Republican parents, but by experts of the fisheries bureau with the president's express permission. This fish, so the experts declare, is found only in one small stream, tributary to the Kern river in the high Sierras of California, called Volcano creek. The president has taken a personal interest in its preservation and has directed that every effort be made to propagate it artificially and to distribute it over the United States. It is hardy and prolific and the experts believe it will thrive and multiply in the cold streams of the Adirondacks and in other parts of the Eastern United States, as well as in the mountainous regions of the Pacific.

"An expedition sent to investigate the fish made an enthusiastic report to the president, in which it was stated that in richness of color this trout 'was not equaled by any other known species.' In form it was described as 'no less beautiful, having perfect lines, and fins large and well proportioned.' The report continues:

"Salmo Roosevelti' (to give the fish its proper scientific name) is a golden trout. When it jumps out of the water in the sunshine, it looks as if it were literally made of gold. On the back it is of a light yellowish olive color, but the lower sides and belly are a bright golden yellow, and along the middle of each runs a rosy band. The gills are rosy, and so likewise are the fins, except the back fin, which, as well as the tail, is olive and yellow mottled with black spots. It is about a foot in length."

"For the protection of the fish, the president has been asked to extend the limits of Mt. Whitney military reservation so as to include the whole of Volcano creek in order that all requisite regulations in regard to fishing may be enforced.

"The fact that the president has chosen a Pacific coast fish on which to bestow his name is another evidence of his acknowledged perspicacity. As it is 'unequaled by any other known species' and is 'vigorous and admirably fitted for life in the turbulent waters in which it dwells,' its selection for the honor, especially at this time, is a peculiarly appropriate one.

"The president, nevertheless, will be lucky if he escapes being accused by his opponent of attempting by this means to influence the Isaac Walton vote in the house or senate.

Victor Point Items.

The Fourth is past and gone. We Victor Pointers took Salem in great shape. We visited the Skidoo, took chances on the "country store," and are now hard at work, and waiting to see if our fortunes will come true, as told by Madame Romatela.

The rain which threatened the destruction of the hay crop is over, and we are having ideal haying weather, also ideal hay to cut.

Crops of all kinds, wheat, oats, chest, clover and vetch never looked better than now. Grain cutting will probably begin in about two weeks. The oats are beginning to assume a yellow tinge now.

Work is progressing rapidly on F. M. Miller's new house, under the skillful management of Anton Darn and Frank Kauffman.

Sylvester Doerfler had a narrow escape from death from drowning while attempting to swim across the dam at Fisher's sawmill. The little fellow sank twice, but was rescued by Roy Darby before going down the third time. If parents are not more careful about allowing their children to go there, there will be a fatal accident to record before the summer is over.

TO HONOR OREGON'S GREATEST

Would Pull the State's Other Leg for Marbles, Also for a Wad of Money

The political gossipers who must have something to talk about during the heated term, in the absence of vital political events, have stirred up a story that pressure will be brought to bear on the next legislature to have an appropriation made in the interest of high art.

The particular form this high art will take is to beautify the state house grounds with some high class statuary of the men who did so much to make Oregon great in pioneer days.

It is argued that Oregon owes it to posterity to have in the public grounds statues of such men as General Joe Lane, Senator Nesmith, Colonel E. D. Balder, Dr. McLoughlin, and others. Almost every other state in the Union has the grounds of its capitol adorned with the statues of its great men and the friends of the movement say that this is an auspicious time, as the people of the state were never more prosperous and free from debt.

In times of profound peace states usually turn to arts, sciences and civic adornment. It is argued that the state could not spend a moderately large amount of money to better advantage than in having some such statuary made for the capitol grounds.

The state of Oregon has spent little of nothing for the perpetuation of its great men on canvass, or in marble or bronze. The statues, alleged to be oil paintings of the governors, that line the walls of the senate chamber and hall of representatives, to the contrary notwithstanding.

Friends of the movement express the hope that in the event the next legislature decides to do this, it will not attempt to pay political debts by awarding the contracts to "artists" who have rendered their party signal service as word beeters.

HUNTING A PLACE TO SQUAT

A Country School House That
Has no Place to Call
Its Home

Two cases will come up for trial in the circuit court today which grow out of the neighborhood row over the location of the school house in district No. 80. These suits are Lawrence against Keene and Howd and Sutherland against the same defendants.

District No. 80 is a prosperous community in the fertile vine-clad regions of the classic Waldo Hills. Last March an election was held appropriating money to build a school house, and to settle the question of the location of the building. The contest was a war, one, there being several factions, one of which desired the house near the homes. Lawrence and Sullivan are citizens of the district, Keene is chairman of the district school board, and Howd is clerk of the same aggregation.

At the election Lawrence and Sullivan, who belonged to one of the factions, showed up to vote. Keene and Howd, who are members of the other faction, refused to permit them the privilege.

Then the gentlemen, whose ballots were rejected, brought suit in the court of Justice Turner against Keene and Howd for damages, alleging they had been injured $245, on account of being allowed to vote. When the case was tried Justice Turner gave a verdict granting the full amount sued for to Lawrence, but decided against Sullivan.

Both parties to the suit were dissatisfied with Justice Turner's decision, and took an appeal to the circuit court. In the meantime the location of the new school house in the rich and fertile community of district No. 80, nestled among the sun-kissed Waldo Hills, is seeking a place to squat.

It is probable that another election will be held to determine this momentous matter.

In this litigation Holmes & Holmes are attorneys for the plaintiffs and Carson & Cannon represent the office of the school board.
