COLONEL HOFER TALKED
Salem Editor Would Succeed Collector of Customs I. L. Patterson

(Portland Telegram, July 10.)
A slight ripple has been caused to wave across the situation in the fight for collector of customs to succeed I. L. Patterson, by the announcement that E. Hofer, of Salem, had asked his editor into the ring, and became a candidate for the place already sought by G. A. Westgate, of Albany; P. S. Malcom, of Portland, and James Monroe Shelley, of Eugene.
Only recently, so it seems, Colonel Hofer has laid aside the pen that mole's public sentiment around the Daily Capital Journal office and concluded to dabble in politics. The colonel got the political flavor at the last primaries, and ran for representative, but went glimmering when the votes were counted. Had the colonel voted for himself, he would have been nominated, for he lost in the shuffle by just one vote. He said at the time that he could have had it just as well as not, if he had asked for votes, but that he refused to do, being of a very independent disposition.
For a while the colonel dropped out of the political vortex altogether—and did nothing but hustle for the ticket. He strove mightily, and when the votes were counted took credit of having done something in his humble way for the cause. Then he hoisted the flag of his ambition again and began pulling a few wires for a federal plum. If Westgate, Malcom and Shelley fail, and the mantle doesn't fall somewhere else, the colonel has high hopes.

As Salem has secured a high federal office in this appointment of Claud Hatch to be bank examiner, it is not likely that another fat federal office can be secured for any Salem candidate.
Besides The Capital Journal editor is not in the indelible class. He has grabbed no public lands, he has done nothing wrong that brings him in the range of Oregon political lightning.
Doubtless he does not need the office to make a living, and will pursue none of the ordinary methods of solicitation and languishing generally considered necessary to get the appointment.
Fourthly, he is already committed to the support of Senator Fulton and Senator-elect Bourne, and these gentlemen will probably give the office to some one who can be of more service to them.
There are seventeen other reasons why the editor of this paper does not expect the appointment, and he prefers his personal and political independence to any office under the sun.

New Store for Salem.
A new firm will soon blossom out in Salem business circles. It will be composed of Messrs. John A. Mills and Amos Vasa. Both are well known as successful business workers, and they will no doubt achieve the success they merit as such. They will handle shoes, furnishing goods and notions, and will be located in the Y. M. C. A. building corner rooms. They have induced the organization to paint their entire block, and make other improvements suitable to their convenience.

MORPHINE BOOZE PISTOL

A Deadly Combination, and Yet the Would be Suicide Survives Them all

Because the whiskey he drank counteracted the effects of the morphine; because the morphine he took overthrew the action of the booze; because he held his gun in his left hand when he fired and his aim was poor, and, finally, because the doctors arrived before he finished the job, the efforts of John Carrier to commit suicide yesterday in the Keith Hotel, on State street, were fruitless.
Mr. Carrier, who for a long time has been in the employ of the state insane asylum, has for some days been lingering a little too long around the flowing bowl, and on Monday and yesterday his mania took a suicidal tendency. He is said to have taken enough morphine to kill a dozen men yesterday morning, but it wouldn't work. He had previously made his will, in which he bequeathed his property to two friends, also attendants at the asylum, and to a saloon man in the city. He also wrote a statement that his death was by his own hands, and was a deliberate case of suicide. He asked to be buried in the clothes he wore. Well, he woke up. He was quiet down and was supposed to be asleep, when Mrs. Keith heard a gun shot in the room occupied by Carrier. This was about noon yesterday. With utter disregard of danger to herself Mrs. Keith rushed into the room, and made the crazed man give up his pistol. The weapon was still smoking, and he had fired into the wall. It is evident that he had held his pistol in his left hand, and tried to shoot into his head, but missed his aim. The bullet is still embedded in the ceiling.
A physician and several men were summoned, and after a hard struggle, subdued the young man, and later in the day he was removed to the hospital.
Mr. Carrier is about 34 years old, and has always borne a good character. It is said that he has on several times shown a suicidal tendency.

The Superstitious of Sailor Men.

All sailors are superstitious and the legends of the sea are legion, ranging from phantom ships to spectral lights suddenly gleaming from yardarms and mastheads, says the English Illustrated magazine. That many of these legends are very ancient may be proved by the fact that sea harpies are described by Homer and Hesiod, while according to Virgil they plundered Aeneas during his voyage to Italy. The beautiful sirens, too are of classic origin.
Weird indeed are the tales of haunting spectres, fit to send one's nerves shivering after a hearty supper, well suited for Christmas time ghost stories.
There are four Goblins of Dunster's Ness, not ghosts but evil water spirits, who appear twice a year, only in mid-winter, but bring bad luck in a very short time to the ship from which they are sighted.
We must mention Adamastor, the dreaded ghost of the Cape, that used to be seen in a halo of cloud and mist over Good Hope, and also the silent man of Wexford Harbor, the wandering soul of the Dutch skipper who lost his smack on his way to Dublin some three centuries ago.
Ghostly apparitions are not, however, the only ones to be feared at sea. In the case of St. Elmo's fire these apparitions take the shape of spectral lights suddenly gleaming from yardarms or mastheads. It was known by ancient navigators as Castro and Polux—the best omen if seen double, but a signal of danger if seen single.
Jack has a score of well known superstitions, many of which are of very long descent, such as the presence of figureheads, the blessings of ships, and the "crossing of the line." And it will be remembered that the Prince and Princess of Wales both paid tribute to old Neptune while on their journey to Australia.
Baseball Players and Foot Racers!
Louis J. Kruger, ex-champion long-distance foot racer of Germany and Holland, writes, October 27, 1901: "During my training of eight weeks' foot races at Salt Lake City, in April last, I used Ballard's Snow-Liniment to my greatest satisfaction. Therefore, I highly recommend Snow-Liniment to all who are troubled with sprains, bruises or rheumatism." 35c, 50c and $1. Sold by D. J. Fry.

FLOODS STILL INCREASE

Forty Thousand Acres of Crops Destroyed by the Raging Torrents

Stockton, Cal., July 11.—Over 40,000 acres of the richest lands in this county are now inundated from the San Joaquin river. Last night the levee on the old Jones tract broke, overflowing 6000 acres of barley and potatoes and asparagus. Charles Woreing, with 30 horses, has been caught in the flood on it. The man will escape, but the horses are penned in and must drown.
Bought Fish and Poultry Market.
C. H. Pratt, a resident of this city for the past four years, has purchased the fish and poultry market recently conducted on State street by A. C. Rockhill, who will probably engage in business elsewhere. Mr. Pratt had considerable experience in the poultry business previous to coming to Salem.

Cinch Lee Wah.

Lee Wah, the Chinaman, who was accused of obtaining money under false pretenses, was bound over to the circuit court. His bonds were fixed at $500. The preliminary trial took place this morning in Justice Webster's court.

Not True Bills.

The grand jury returned today a note true bill in each of the following cases:
State against Lyllis Anderson, State against Ernest Kappalahna, State against Lenna Kappalahna.

A Stray Salmon.

A splendid salmon ran up Mill creek last evening and got stranded near the Commercial street bridge. It was picked up by one of the engineers at the water plant, and by this time has probably found its way to the oven.

State Summer School.

Encouraging reports come from the state summer school at Monmouth. The enrollment today has reached 82, and it is expected that it will reach 100 within a few days.
