MERCHANTS BEAT Y. M. C. A.

Shut the Alphabets Out by Two to Nothing.

Team.	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
Y. M. C. A.	2	1	666
T. K. W. M.	2	1	666
Fairmounts	1	2	333
Merchants	1	2	333

The Merchants put up a little surprise last night in the baseball line, when they shut out the Y. M. C. A. 2 to 0. Yesterday's game was probably the best of the series yet played. There were no earned runs, and both teams held the others down in good shape. It was in the first inning that the Merchants brought in their two runs. King got a hit out past second, which rolled into the tall grass near the shed across from the grandstand and could not be found for some time, during which both King and another man, who was on first, scored. In the rest of the five innings neither team could put a man over the plate. Quite a crowd was out to see the game.

Out Ran the Train.

The Baker City Democrat says: Passengers on the eastbound Sumpter Valley train Sunday afternoon enjoyed and unusual spectacle coming over Austin summit. Two deer frightened from the brush ran parallel with the train for fully a mile along the roadside. The animals were not more than 100 yards from the track, and they presented a pretty picture as they bounded along ahead of the swiftly moving train.

Will Locate Here.

Dr. G. V. Ellis, of Medical Lake, Washington, has rented the office now occupied by R. R. Ryan, the real estate man, and will move to Salem about the first of July. Dr. Ellis is a physician of many years' experience, and will be a valuable acquisition to Salem's circle of medical men. The doctor is a man with a family, and intends to make Salem his permanent home.

Band Concert.

The Salem Military Band entertained a very large and appreciative audience in Wilson avenue last night. The many improvements to the avenue grounds are quite noticeable, and are transforming the spacious plot into one of the most beautiful places in the city. The program rendered last night was excellent, the weather was ideal, and the many hundreds who were present spent a very enjoyable evening.

HE LIKES OREGON.

And Thinks It Swifter Even Than Philadelphia.

Salem has been honored the past few days by the presence in her midst of one of the world's greatest scientific authorities, in the person of Professor Joseph P. Remington. The gentlemen is president and dean of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, and while on a tour of the West has been the guest of his former students, D. J. Fry and Miss Kittle Harbord, of this city. While in Portland he was entertained at a banquet given by former students, when a most delightful reunion was had. It was upon that occasion that he most felicitously told how Oregon had been the first state to honor one of the fair sex by placing her upon the State Board of Pharmacy, referring to Miss Harbord, who most honorably fills that position as the Salem representative of the profession.

Prof. Remington is a comfortable Philadelphian, typically deliberate, but not exactly comatose. He tells a good story, and especially when it is at his expense. He has been more than happy in Oregon, where his friends have deluged him with roses and cherries, not to mention other blandishments. Dr. Remington is enthusiastic over the wonderful resources of Oregon, and what nature has done for this section. He also predicts great things for her commercial future, as the Pacific coast development rushes on. This truth is, he probably finds here the real Western mental atmosphere which everybody likes, but sufficiently tempered with slowness to even suit a Philadelphian. At all events he had a most enjoyable visit here, and his friends hope he may return at some future time.

Professor Remington is the leader authority on pharmacy in the United States and a recognized authority in Europe. He is editor-in-chief of the United States Dispensary, a compilation issued by the federal government every 10 years. He is also associated with Dr. Wiley, head chemist of the department of agriculture in preparing the new federal pure food law.

Dr. Remington has been touring the Pacific Northwest for several weeks and is making his first visit in Salem. He is in love with the coast country, and expressed great astonishment yesterday at the wonderful undeveloped resources which he found here.

Dr. Remington is best known for his book entitled "The Practice of Pharmacy," a standard authority used in nearly every college in the United States.

BUILT A LAUNCH.

Salem Boys Have a Pretty Little Pleasure Boat.

Two of Salem's bright and energetic boys have been engaged for some time in building a gasoline launch. The boys are Charley Eyre and Harry Stenstrom, and most of the work was done after night in the little shop at the home of George Eyre. Last night they launched their boat, and though bothered a little by their engine, a two-horse power gasoline, they soon got it working and proceeded to spit a long crack in the slough near the mouth of Mill creek. The little boat, which is called the "Thelma," is about 16 feet long, a very pretty model, and promises to develop a speed that would do justice to the name of "Salome."

BERRY GOES FREE

The test case of the habeas corpus proceedings to obtain the release of R. E. Berry was this afternoon decided by Judge Galloway in circuit court. The ruling was that the credits due all prisoners should be allowed under the amendment, which went into effect May 25, 1907.

Berry was sent from Umatilla county to serve a six-year sentence on the charge of forgery. He was received at the penitentiary May 17, 1892, and at the time the amendment went into effect (May 25, 1907) was entitled to 223 days credit. This would have released him on August 10, 1907.

If the law had been effect and credits were allowed under section 3670 and 3672, as amended by chapter 81 of the '97 law, the prisoner would have gone free October 4, 1906, and if credits were allowed under such amendments he would have been released on May 25, 1907, the day the law went into effect.

The clerk at the prison this afternoon is going through the books to ascertain the time of expiration of sentences of prisoners, whose date of freedom will be considerably earlier under this decision. No definite statement can be made this afternoon, but the prison officials think there will be perhaps six or seven whose sentences will be terminated by this decision.
