CIRCUS PARADE REVIVED.

Barnum and Bailey Show Inaugurates New Ideas in Street Spectacle.

The public hail with delight the announcement that when the Barnum and Bailey Greatest Show on Earth visits Salem on Thursday, August 27, it will again present the free street pageant as a part of its daily program. But not in any particular will the new parade be similar to those given in the past by an amusement enterprise. The promise has been made that a procession three times the length of any other with ten times the investment, and not one old feature, would be offered, and the promise is being more than fulfilled.

For four years this circus has omitted this part of the day's entertainments. Those years, however, have been devoted to the creating of new ideas and the gathering of strange features from every land. For two years day and night artists and mechanics have been toiling in the foreign workshops of the circus at Stock on Trent, England, putting these ideas into effect. The result of these labors is a parade indescribably beautiful and with novelty and strangeness in every detail.

It has great value as a world's exposition, for it presents every human type that is strange and exhibits the vehicles, costumes, tapestry, banners, war engines, statuary and art of savage lands and wealthy kingdoms. The gods of mythology, the idols of child-romance, heathen images and the priceless statuary of Italy's galleries have been reproduced in bronze and are displayed on golden floats. A complete menagerie is displayed in open dens. 700 horses of the finest breed are utilized, there are chains of elephants and herds of camels, all in oriental harness, while 1,500 men, women and children are concerned in the giving of the parade.

It is natural to expect this great circus to lead all others in the quality of its street spectacle as well as in other departments of the big show, yet never before in its splendid history has it displayed such seeming extravagance as is seen this season in the re-establishment of the parade. It is gold, silver, burnished brass, silk and satin in its material make-up and the sight is one of surpassing splendor.

The performance, too, has undergone vast improvements. To it have been added a newly conceived thriller known as "Autos That Pass in the Air." It is not to be classed with anything that has been done in the past. The act has reached a point of rashness and danger that lifts it far beyond former sensational mid-air somersault acts, which now become commonplace and unattractive.

Briefly stated, two automobiles controlled by two young women, are released at the same instant from the top of a steep and narrow track. The track terminates in a sharp upward curve which sends the cars up into space. The leading machine while poised for the fraction of a second in mid-air is completely encircled by the car which was in the rear at the start. The machines land simultaneously, their order reversed, on a short and narrow ground platform.

Passing of the Washtub.
The modern steam laundry is the latest instance of the routing of a homb industry. Solitary washtub and red-armed washwoman—these are industrial types that are passing, as surely as individual loom and shuttle have passed, and the individual dyevat for cloth. They are beaten back by the advance of the machine, which has invaded and overcome the province of one kind of hand work after another. The type in the ascendant today is the low stone building with its washing machines, mangles and steam ironers of a dozen kinds; its system of marking worked out in minute detail, and its network of agencies and drivers' routes to gather in trade from hotels and factories, from rail roads and private homes. Here and there circumstance gives added reason for the growth of the newer type. A railroad center with its stream of travelers demanding quick, efficient service, its stations and Pullman cars with their immaculate porters, its hotels and cafes, sending wagon-loads of table linen—these are consumers who can scarcely wait until it is the whim of the sun that their linen be dried. The commercial laundry is the only possibility.—Charities and The Commons.

A Faithful Friend.
"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy since it was first introduced to the public in 1872, and have never found one instance where a cure was not speedily effected by its use. When a man has used a remedy for 35 years he knows its value and is competent to speak. For sale by Dr. Stone's drug store.
