He Held up a Train in Chicago

Lone Bandit Holds-up Train in Heart of City Robbed Express Clerk and Escaped With $50,000

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] Chicago, Feb. 1.—The depredations of Jesse James, the Younger boys and other old-time desperadoes were backed off the boards here today by the operations of a lone bandit, who last night held up an express train in the heart of Chicago's business district and fought his way to freedom with loot variously estimated at from $50,000 to $100,000.

The robbery, one of the boldest in Chicago's history, was the work of a steel-nerved man. Using a blue handkerchief for a mask, the bandit forced the express messenger to turn over the key to his safe, containing yesterday's entire receipts at the Union Stock Yards.

The conductor, armed with a revolver, attempted to block the robber's path, but was knocked down by a blow from the robber's fist. Then the bandit jumped from the train, and, mingling with the theatre crowds in the street, escaped.

The robbed train is known as the "Stock Yards Special," and is used to carry money and valuable express packages between the stock yards and the downtown district.

MORE BILLS PASSED OVER GOVERNOR'S VETO

In addition to the two bills mentioned in yesterday's Capital Journal as having been passed by that body over the governor's veto, the house passed three other vetoed bills. Then, tired out, with its efforts, the house decided to make the remaining vetoed bills a special order of business for Monday afternoon.

The vetoed bill passed late yesterday were the following: Senate bill requiring contractors to execute bonds for payment of material and labor bills.

Senate bills making state officers responsible for deficiencies in their departments, passed with only four dissenting votes. The bill provides that deficiencies can only be created with the consent of a state emergency board.

Would Hold More Than Forty Days

There is a possibility that the legislature will remain in session five or six days longer than the allotted forty days in order to finish its work. There is no constitutional bar to the legislature remaining in session as long as it wants to, but after the official forty days' session each member would have to pay his own expenses, the state paying nothing.

Speaker McArthur himself sounded the slogan for a longer session late yesterday in an address in which he complimented the house for its hard work so far and fidelity to duty.

The Lake Involved in Dispute

Proposed Change of County Boundary Would Put Marion Lake in Linn—Best Water Power in the State

The kernel of the whole fight between Marion and Linn counties over the boundary question is the possession of Marion lake. Engineers who have examined the lake and Marion creek, which flows out of the lake into the Santiam, declare that it will furnish the best water power in the state, and it is said that Portland promoters and certain Salem men whose names have not been made known, are behind a proposed project to develop the power.

A Portland engineer who has recently investigated the possibilities of the stream says that Marion creek will develop 150,000 horsepower, and that the power can be brought to Salem and sold at the nominal sum of $9 per horsepower per annum.

Two Contending Bills.

The two sides of the question are represented in the senate by Senators Carson and Miller each of whom has introduced a bill. The Carson bill holds to the line that has been recognized as the line for years.

As described the line extends up the Willamette river to the Santiam thence up the Santiam to the North Fork; thence along the North Fork to the Cascade mountains; thence east to the summit of the Rocky mountains.

The bill introduced by Senator Miller, of Linn county, would describe the line as follows:

Up the Willamette river to the Santiam; thence up the Santiam to the mouth of the Whitewater; thence east on the nearest section line to the summit of the Cascade mountains.

The result of following the Whitewater instead of the North Fork would be that not only Marion lake, but a large area of country formed by the southern bearing of the North Fork and including several small Marion county towns would be cut off from Marion and placed in Linn county.
