HAMILTON MUST FACE ASSORTMENT OF WIVES

Steps Being Taken to Have Him Returned on Charge of Passing Worthless Checks—Two Wives Meet Him.

Oakland, Cal., July 15.—That steps were taken by the local authorities Tuesday night to secure the return of Frederick Kents Hamilton from Sulphur, Okla., to face charges of bad check passing, was understood here to-day.

A message from Sacramento said no application had been made for Hamilton's extradition, but it was expected the necessary papers from Oakland would reach the capital in the course of a day and that they would be acted on promptly. No difficulty was anticipated in having the prisoner turned over by the Oklahoma authorities.

While the accusation of passing a worthless check for $1000 was the one on which extradition was sought, the expectation was that Hamilton would also be called on to answer many embarrassing questions concerning the multiplicity of wives he is said to have taken to himself in California and elsewhere.

Two of the number, who, it was understood, were coming to confront him, were Mrs. Bertha Arnett Conner Hamilton of Los Angeles and Mrs. Grace Bailey Hamilton of Rochester, N. Y.

LOSS WILL BE LIGHT.

Portland, Ore., July 15.—The damage to wheat in Gilliam and Sherman counties by storms last Saturday and Sunday nights will not be great, according to C. L. Smith, agriculturist of the O. W. R. & N. company, today. Smith personally investigated. The loss was at first reported to amount to many thousands.

AUSTRIA IS AFRAID TO PUSH THE INQUIRY

War Talk Over Assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand Dwindles, Simmers and Dies.

AUSTRIA FEARS RUSSIA AND ALSO A REBELLION

Servia Not Strong as a Nation, But Powerful as a People, Millions of Austrian Subjects Servians.

London, July 15.—Among diplomats here there has been considerable comment concerning the suddenness with which the Austrian talk of a demand for a Servian explanation of the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife simmered down to nothing.

There seems to be no question that the plot was hatched in Belgrade, the Servian capital. It was also pretty clear that, though the government as a government probably had nothing to do with it, certain high government officials were involved and there was no doubt at all that the weapons and explosives used by the assassin and the would-be but unsuccessful assassin were from the Servian arsenal.

Taking these things into consideration, it was the general view in the European chancelleries that a Servian explanation really was due. The Austrian press and Austrian public men were outspoken enough, too, for several days after the killings, in their declarations that one would be forthcoming or that Servia would suffer for it.

After which all this war talk dwindled off into a little subdued grumbling and then into silence. Servia did not explain, evidently does not intend to explain and has not been asked for an explanation. It simply out-faced its powerful neighbor.

Diplomats say Russia's friendship for Servia may have had something to do with this. It is quite likely the czar would have interfered if an Austrian invasion of Servia had been undertaken and naturally the Vienna government would think twice about a clash with Russia.

But according to good judges of the situation in southeastern Europe a consideration which probably had a good deal more weight with Emperor Francis Joseph than fear of Russia was the practical certainty that he would have rebellion in his own country on his hands the moment he attempted to discipline the Servians.

The latter are not very important as a nation but as a race they form a large part of the population of Austria's southeastern provinces and the temper they showed following the incident at Sarajevo left no doubt of their bitter hatred for the government they live under.

The truth is, in view of most Euro-pian diplomats, that the Austrian government made the best of Archduke Francis Ferdinand's murder because it was afraid if it resented it, it would precipitate a revolt which might rend the empire to pieces.

Now are observers of the situation altogether sure that the danger is yet over.

Late Yesterday

Tutuila, Samoa.—Badly damaged by striking an uncharted rock between Tutuila and the Anaa islands, the American gunboat Princeton was beached at the former place.

Washington.—The pure food board ruled that jelly with gelatin in it cannot be labelled pure fruit jelly.

Chester, Lee Street, England.—Suffragettes tried to burn Cocken hall, Lord Durham's residence, but the flames were extinguished with small damage.

Chico, Cal.—Thomas V. Pimple, a prominent Butte county resident, and a companion were killed in an automobile accident.

Lake Cormorant, Miss.—A mob took James Bailey, a negro who was suspected of mule stealing, from the constable who was starting to jail with him and lynched him.

London.—The attorney general held there was no evidence to justify Sir Thomas Lipton's prosecution in connection with the recent army nineteen scandal.

Oakland, Cal.—Samuel Spitz, inventor of the "wireless eye," a bogus appliance supposed to giveocular results similar to the aurial manifestations of the wireless telegraph, was held to the superior court, charged with obtaining money on his device by false pretenses.

San Francisco.—Alfred Johnnissen, the Norwegian sailor shanghaied into San Quentin as a substitute for Peter Grimes, was formally freed by Federal Judge Dooling.

MT. LASSEN HAS ITS REGULAR BLOW-OUT

Makes Its Eighteenth Exhibition Early This Morning, Sending a Smoke Column Fully a Mile Above the Crater.

Redding, Cal., July 15.—Mount Lassen burst at 6 a. m. today into its eighteenth eruption.

The outbreak was almost equal to the most violent of the series, June 14. Vast puffs of intensely black smoke ascended vertically to a height of fully 5,000 feet, where, encountering an upper air current, the cloud drifted southward for a distance of ten or twelve miles.

The eruption continued in full strength for two hours when steam began to take the place of the smoke. At 9:30, however, the eruption was not entirely over.

SUIT OVER ARMORY BONDS UP ON APPEAL.

The suit of Frank Rankin, attacking the constitutionality of a $25,000 bond issue in Eugene for building an armory, has been appealed to the supreme court. The plaintiff says the residents of the city cannot be taxed for anything beneficial to all the people of the state unless all the people are taxed. He asks that the city be enjoined from issuing the bonds which were approved by the people at the last city election. Mr. Rankin declares that the collection of a tax for paying interest and creating a sinking fund would be unconstitutional. The $25,000 is the city's part of a fund of $75,000 raised for building the armory. It looks as though this point was settled in the Portland bridge suit decided Tuesday, where Multnomah county is taxed to build a bridge which it will present to the state.

A RAILROAD.

Washington, July 15.—Joseph Ramsey, Jr., ex-president of the Wahsien, Wheeling and Lake Erie and Western Maryland railroads, was a witness before the interstate commerce commission today.

His story was still in the preliminary stage, but from every indication it promised to uncover high financing methods rivaling the one told by President Mellon of the New Haven.

Ramsey appeared in response to a summons issued as a sequel to a resolution by Congressman Townsend of New Jersey calling for an investigation of the financing of the Pittsburgh Terminal company.

DROWNED WHILE BATHING.

Chicago, July 15.—Nathan S. Martin and his fiancee, Miss Florence Jordan, bathing in Lake Michigan, were caught by an unusually big wave and drowned.
