Inside View Of War Given By Letters From Old Home

From the homes of Germans who are deeply affected by the war that is now raging in Europe comes a letter written by Carl Vogel, a brother of Fred and Julius Vogel of this city, which gives an intimate view of how the conflict is touching the homes and lives of the Germans, and tells of the attitude of the German toward the state of affairs. It is replete with vivid details on happenings that reveal actual conditions better than what simmers through past the censor.

HENRY CLEW'S WEEKLY FINANCIAL LETTER

New York, Aug. 22.—Gradually but surely business of all kinds is being resumed, and the world's commerce is adjusting itself to necessities of war. By far the greatest and most important basis of improvement has been the partial restoration of international trade.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

A few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur brings back its vigor, color, gloss and thickness. Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Considering the abnormal conditions which have prevailed since the European nations became engaged in a death struggle, the banking interests throughout the country have handled their affairs remarkably well; nevertheless, it goes without saying that the banks are under a severe strain to provide for the legitimate wants of their customers and every measure calculated to relieve the situation should be resorted to.

tration of all the vexed questions at issue connected with the present cruel war—a war which possibly could have been averted had the nations involved submitted their disputes to a great international supreme court, the establishment of which I have always advocated—for why should not intelligent, civilized nations adjudicate their differences before a legal tribunal, as individuals do? increase their call loan facilities which, at present, is an essential need. This war will probably prove which is the mightier. It is to be hoped that it will destroy the use of the sword and make the power of the pen everlasting. If so, this will be the last great war with the sword. The pen is all powerful in commerce, and this is a commercial age. The sword is death to commerce, the present cruel slaughter being an evidence thereof. After the first great battle is fought, everyone left to tell the story should urge with voice and pen a final adjustment between the warring nations. Such a result would prove a victory for both sides alike that would produce a general disarmament, thereby saving all the nations concerned from general bankruptcy. Import Scarcely Realized

Excerpts from letters received from his sisters: "In these days many happy anticipations have been destroyed, many a heart has been crushed and many tender threads of love and friendship have been suddenly severed. I realize this well. We may write this, read it and still not realize the momentous import of such words. Who realizes the anguish and knows the extent of same in the many formerly happy homes throughout the continent!

Calamity Came Suddenly

Another sister: "Germany is at war! Yes, this astonishing and alarming fact must be believed by us, for the calamity broke over us so awful suddenly. You will most probably know all about the present developments from the newspapers, as the American papers can take an impartial stand and will most probably report all news without showing partiality to any of the contending nations.
