Thompson, woodworking; Greg Waddell, photography; and Charles Chamberlain, acrylic painting. A new addition to the evening this year will be a silent auction of artwork donated by participating artists, to help raise additional funds for the programs and materials at the library. The annual FOSL art exhibit began in 2006 when the current library building opened and the art committee was formed. The art show affords the community the opportunity to view and support a large number of Sisters Country artists all at one time, in one location. In addition, artists donate 10 percent of any sales to FOSL to help promote the programs at the library.

GRANT: Festival and FAN have partnered to provide access

Christmas recital and witnessed first-hand how APAOS funding is changing lives. “I saw the children dance that receive scholarships and thought what a wonderful, wholesome, positive, joyful, fantastic program these children are participating in,” she said. Sisters Folk Festival’s mission is to enrich lives through the arts; the program ensures more Sisters families can participate. “Sisters attracts many families to the area because of arts-related programming in the schools, but that doesn’t help our children if they can’t afford to participate,” said Yoder. The funding is also helping local businesses. “Prior to APAOS, teachers often gave free lessons to families that couldn’t afford to pay. The scholarships are strengthening these businesses as well.” Slavkovsky and FAN advocate Dawn Cooper work hard to make sure families in Sisters Country have access to resources designed to help them when times are tough. “To see those children perform warmed my heart, and I could only smile with gratitude for the village it took to get those children on the stage,” said Slavkovsky. FAN has received positive feedback from parents, teachers, and students. APAOS levels the playing field for many children, ensuring they are included and able to realize their full potential. Families in need of scholarship funds can contact the FAN office at 541-549-0155 for more information. “Sisters attracts many families to the area because of arts-related programming in the schools, but that doesn’t help our children if they can’t afford to participate.” — Katy Yoder To make a contribution to the APAOS fund, contact Katy Yoder by phone at 541-549-4979, email katy@sistersfolkfestival.org, or drop by the SFF office in the Sisters Art Works building, 204 W.
