Sisters is surrounded by a large number of neighborhoods nestled in ponderosa pines or settled among sage and rock canyons of the high desert. Whatever your lifestyle, you'll find the place to suit you somewhere in Sisters Country.

Neighborhoods like Buck Run, Creekside, Timber Creek and Coyote Springs lie along Whychus Creek, offering the convenience of in-town living with a tree-studded sense of rural seclusion.

A mix of single-family homes and townhomes with mountain views can be found at Pine Meadow Village at the western edge of town.

Crossroads lies about four miles west of town off Highway 242; Tollgate about three miles west off Highway 20.

You can find mini-ranch properties at Desert Sun or find a home along a beautiful meadow in Indian Ford or Sage Meadow.

Or you can venture out into the rimrock country to find a home among juniper and sage in Squaw Creek Canyon Estates.

Realtors in the area can guide you through the process of getting to know Sisters Country. There are many other small neighborhoods in the region that make up the tapestry of Sisters Country.
