DOGS: Event supports FOSL and Furry Friends

The club members encouraged folks to look on as the well-trained canines wove around poles, cleared jumps without knocking poles, raced through tunnels and scaled A-frames, all in record time.

The event included five fun contests for dogs and their pet parents and one contest, the K9 Pie-Eating contest for pooches only.

The contests were $10 for each doggie contestant, and all proceeds benefitted Furry Friends Foundation.

Emcee Scott Buckles, the original 2009 Doggie Dash organizer, announced each contest with gusto and added a sparkle of humor that kept up the momentum.

There were three volunteer contest judges: Fred McCaulou of Sisters Feed & Supply; Dr. Dana Bailey, DVM from Broken Top Veterinary Clinic; and Sana Hayes from BrightSide Animal Center.

“I really love the new location; the shade is really helpful and the park is very visible for people driving by. It’s a great turnout and I thought the contests were well-organized,” said Hayes.

At 10:30 a.m. the contests began, and first up was Best Trick, it was sold out with 10 entries.

Dr. Bonnie Malone and Weezer took the honors.

The Best Look Alike contest winner was Glenda Smith and her standard poodle Bailey, the Best Hair contest winner was Dove, a silken windhound, pet parent Cherie Judd. Best Howl went to Georgia, an Alaskan Klee Kai, pet parent Richard Adler. In the grand finale, the K-9 Pie Eating contest winner was Sedona, a rescue dog — pet parent Renata Thommen.

There were prizes for all events and contests, including Doggie Dash Hydro Flasks, a hand-painted portrait of your dog, dog toys and bowls from Ruffwear, leashes from PetSmart, a bike tune-up from Blazin Saddles, gift certificates from Sisters Feed, toys from Heartwarmers and goodie bags from Central Bark.

Proceeds from the event went to FOSL to help fund purchases to add to Sisters Library’s collection of books and audio books, and to Furry Friends Foundation.

Firearms instructor injured in training

TIMBER (AP) — The Washington County Sheriff’s office says an instructor conducting firearms training was seriously injured when he was hit by shrapnel after an exploding target went off.

The office said 42-year-old Scott Turner of Albany suffered life-threatening injuries in the accident. He was flown Saturday night to a hospital in Portland.

Turner was leading a group of former military and law enforcement officers in firearms training involving the use of Tannerite. The group rented a private facility near the community of Timber.

The training exercise involved shooting the exploding target. The target was placed behind a car door and when it exploded, shrapnel from the car door hit Turner.

Deputies believe it was a training accident but they are investigating.

Jazz Folks to perform at wine bar

Jazz Folks — four musicians with diverse backgrounds and experience — will take the stage at The Open Door on Sunday, August 23, at 6 p.m. to offer up some first-class jazz for Sisters’ music-loving fans.

Jeanne Wentworth, Aaron Rohrbacher, Tyler Cranor and David Wentworth make up Jazz Folks.

Wentworth has enjoyed a stellar classical vocal performing career, including operatic roles, oratorio, jazz and Broadway performances throughout the U.S.

Rohrbacher is an experienced and versatile clarinetist and saxophonist. He is currently a faculty member and instructor of clarinet and saxophone at Cascade School of Music in Bend.

Cranor is a professional bassist with a classical education and broad performance background. Tyler has returned to the Central Oregon area after living and performing in Eugene, Los Angeles, and Virginia Beach, Virginia. He teaches music at Central Oregon Community College, and for the Sisters School District.

David Wentworth began playing drums professionally in high school with his jazz band instructor and other music school grads throughout the Pittsburgh region. While attending college and graduate school, David played fusion, jazz, pop, and cross-over music throughout the region.

The Open Door is co-located with Clearwater Gallery at 303 W. Hood Ave. Call 541-549-6076 for more information.

Phase 1 of the Cloverdale Fire District bond improvement project has begun. This week employees of Keeton King Construction demolished three of the apparatus parking bays at Station 601 on George Cyrus Rd. Plans are to rebuild this section of the building with two larger parking bays for the new pumpers that were ordered from bond proceeds. Construction is anticipated to be complete in 90 days.
