Lighted arrow nocks are now allowed in the deer woods.

HUNTERS: Beware of fire danger in the woods this season heading out by calling the local ODF, Bureau of Land Management or U.S. Forest Service office.

They can also go to <http://www.oregon.gov/ODF/Fire/Pages/Restrictions.aspx> to access an interactive fire-restrictions map. (Note that only the Public Fire Restrictions apply to hunters.) Click on any area in the map to see a list of fire restrictions in areas protected by ODF. Click within public lands areas to find out the land manager and contact info.

Keep Oregon Green Association (KOG) has been partnering with state and federal wildland fire agencies for the last 75 years to increase awareness of Oregon's wild-fire risk and to educate the public in the prevention of human-caused wildfires.

"Besides the fact that we have had more than 50 illegal or unattended campfires lead to wildfires this summer; patrolling fire crews have extinguished nearly 100 campfires that were not completely put out before people left," said KOG Executive Director Kristin Babbs. "It only takes one of these careless acts to lead to the destruction of our forests. Our plea to the hunters and public in general is to be vigilant and have fire prevention front and center in their minds when enjoying what our state has to offer."

As hunters prepare for the 2016 season, the Oregon Department of Forestry, ODFW and its partners ask that hunters take extra caution to keep fires from occurring. Know about restrictions before you go afield and follow them. Below are some of the most common restrictions:

- Campfires are either prohibited or only allowed in approved campgrounds in many areas.
- Smoking and off-road driving is also prohibited in most areas, which includes motorcycles and all-terrain vehicles.

- Vehicles must have either a gallon of water or a fully charged and operational 2.5-pound fire extinguisher and shovel (except when traveling on state highways or county roads).

- ATVs must have a charged and operational 2.5-pound fire extinguisher.

For a list of corporate closures on private timberland, visit ODF's website at <http://www.oregon.gov/ODF/Fire/Pages/Restrictions.aspx> and see the Corporate Closures list. The chart also contains phone numbers to get the latest information from timberland owners. Some Travel Management Areas may be affected by these closures. Contact the landowner for the latest access information.

Federal land: Check the U.S. Forest Service or BLM website or call them for closures and restrictions.

Hunters should always check the What's New section at the front of the annual Big Game Regulations to learn about changes from the previous year.

Lighted arrow nocks are now allowed for bowhunters. Lighted nocks increase visibility of an arrow and make it easier to follow an arrow's flight and retrieve it.
