Feminist bookstore sours on 'Portlandia'

PORTLAND (AP) 'A Portland feminist bookstore is cutting ties with the TV comedy "Portlandia," which used its space to film sketches parodying a feminist bookstore.

The Oregonian/OregonLive reports (<http://bit.ly/2dgTaDt>) that actors Carrie Brownstein and Fred Armisen wore long-haired wigs and frumpy clothing as the humorless, aggressively conscientious co-owners of the Women and Women First bookstore in IFC's "Portlandia."

The Portland store, In Other Words, initially enjoyed the publicity. But its front door now features a sign listing several grievances with the show, including transmisogyny, racism, gentrification, queer antagonism and devaluation of feminist discourse.

The 23-year-old nonprofit has faced financial struggles and is currently running a fundraising campaign to help stay afloat.

In Other Words did not immediately respond to requests for comment Wednesday. An IFC spokeswoman was not immediately available for comment.

PLANNER: McConkie loves the outdoor lifestyle of Sisters

Central Oregon has been a favorite destination for McConkie and her husband for the past eight years. About six months ago they decided to seriously consider moving here, and then McConkie saw the ad for a senior planner in Sisters and decided to apply. Following a phone interview, McConkie visited in person with staff at City Hall and was hired for the position.

"My expectations have more than been met," said McConkie.

She is currently living with friends in Bend while her husband, who works in advertising, awaits the closing of their Magnolia-area house sale later this month. They have found a place to rent for now and will be moving their belongings in late October.

The McConkies are avid skiers, cyclists, and outdoor enthusiasts who look forward to exploring their new home territory with their two wire-haired pointing griffon dogs.

BreAnne McConkie is the City's new senior planner.

"I love the four seasons," McConkie said.

For now, as she settles into her new job with the Community Development Department, McConkie said she hopes to take time to watch and learn so that she can understand the big planning picture here in Sisters. She said the issues facing Sisters are very probably those faced by the bigger cities — urban growth expansion and maintaining the quality of life for the residents.

"My goal is that 40 years from now, people will be able to make sense of what we've done today," McConkie said.
