

Sisters furniture-maker enters new market

New startup Oregon Grow Cabinets is focusing on the burgeoning home-growing movement with a new suite of grow cabinets constructed to fine-furniture standards and equipped with innovative climate controls.

“Our cabinets are an industry game-changer,” said Adam Bronstein, owner/founder. “They are designed to provide you with the perfect customizable growing environment while looking great in your home. Our grow cabinets are something you will be proud to display. There is nothing like our products on the market today, and they are built here in Central Oregon.”

People are discovering that they can grow for themselves what they used to buy, and Oregon Grow Cabinets make the home-growing experience streamlined and easy. Whether it’s growing cannabis or vegetables, the climate-controlled growing environment inside an Oregon Grow Cabinet takes the guesswork out of gardening and helps to ensure that your plants thrive. Growing your own also allows consumers to avoid the pesticides and fertilizers used by commercial growers.

“Nothing can match the reward of growing and providing for yourself,” Bronstein says. “If you don’t have control from start to finish, how can you really know what you are consuming? I like having the piece of mind of knowing exactly how my crops are grown. It also allows me to focus on the quality of what I grow.”

A zero-compromise approach to form, function and quality all came together during the development of the suite of Oregon Grow cabinets.

“When I decide on making a significant purchase in life, I am looking for products that add value and provide me with day-to-day enjoyment,” Bronstein said.

A fine-furniture-maker by trade, Bronstein reworked and fine-tuned the cabinet designs for more than a year before it met his high quality standards.

“I wanted to merge the worlds of indoor growing and furniture-making together, and I am proud to launch Oregon Grow Cabinets and bring a beautiful and functional product to market.”

Council sets goals for City

By Sue Stafford
Correspondent

Sisters City Council voted to approve the 2017/18 City of Sisters Council Goals and Objectives at last week’s Council meeting.

The goals the Council will focus their efforts on are: economic growth and diversity; financial transparency and accountability; organizational and operational effectiveness; and effective public communication and outreach.

This year’s goals were determined through a process involving the Council, the City manager, City department heads, and examples of goal setting materials from other Central Oregon communities.

The resulting document will aid in building the budget for the coming fiscal year and can be adjusted as needed with the passage of time and development of new circumstances.

A helpful tool has been created where the four main goals are listed across the top of a grid, along with estimated cost, the fund(s) involved, and the budget year charged. Listed down the grid, by department responsible for a project, are the objectives/activities planned for fiscal year 2017/18, with a designation of the goals being addressed by the objective.

For example, the Community Development Department has as an objective to evaluate the development code for livability standards and improvements to economic development. One of the activities that will be undertaken in support of that will be to make revisions to the municipal code. That activity supports three of the four main goals.

The grid will serve as both a roadmap and a checklist for any activities undertaken by the Council or City departments. It provides an assessment tool at any time to see if the City is on course to attain their goals. If a particular project isn’t supporting one of the overall goals, then it either shouldn’t be considered, or it is an indication that the goal/objectives need to be revisited.

When the budget committee meets in May, they will be able to use the grid to determine if a specific budget item request will support any of the four major Council goals.
