Copies of this evidence can be obtained at a reasonable cost from the City. Copies of the City's staff reports shall be available for review upon request at no cost at least seven days before the hearings. Testimony may be provided in writing to the staff member listed above prior to or during the public hearing, and anyone wishing to testify will be given the opportunity to speak on this application during the public hearings. All relevant testimony will be considered. The meeting location is accessible to persons with disabilities. Requests for an interpreter for the hearing impaired or for other accommodations for persons with disabilities should be made at least 48 hours before the meeting by calling Kerry Prosser, City Recorder, at (541) 323-5213.

Couple builds custom flamenco, classic guitars

By Patrick Fancher
Corvallis Gazette-Times

ALSEA (AP) — A love for flamenco guitar brought John Shelton and Susan Farretta together during college in the mid-1960s.

It was only the beginning for Shelton-Farretta Guitars.

"John was always looking for a better guitar, so we started building a better guitar," says Farretta, Shelton's wife of 46 years.

Shelton and Farretta of Alsea are master luthiers who have built custom flamenco and classical guitars as a team for the past 40 years.

"I grew up in the Philippines, where the guitar is almost the national instrument," Farretta said.

Shelton, who grew up in Portland, got an early introduction to woodworking, including basic cabinetry.

At Portland State University (then known as Portland State College), Shelton became fascinated with flamenco guitar.

"About my freshman year at college I took up the guitar and started playing. I taught myself for years," Shelton said.

A good friend of his, who also played guitar, helped him build his first guitar in 1967.

"We just sat down and built a couple of guitars together," Shelton said. "Of course, being a woodworker, it just came natural."

Shelton and Farretta met at the University of Portland, where she was enrolled.

"He was playing flamenco, and I was very interested in flamenco dance, and that was kind of the impetus when we finally got together," Farretta said.

Shelton taught Farretta what he knew about building guitars, and she was as devoted as he was. They got married in 1971.

Shelton played flamenco guitar professionally for more than 40 years, and also taught students. The flamenco guitars were popular early on.

"He always had a student waiting for the next one to take, because it was all limber, wonderful and easy to play," Farretta said.

The couple performed and toured with several different companies and groups in addition to building guitars.

"We were always building. It was a very busy life," Farretta said.

They also built classical guitars for friends in Portland, until they met a famous customer with a special request.

Renowned classical guitarist Manuel López Ramos came to Portland to perform a concert and was interested in meeting Shelton to see if he could repair a double-body guitar that he had bought in
