Jinny Reed saw the Milli fire grow as it burned in dangerous snags.

FIRE: Blaze blew up on Wednesday afternoon, running east

She called in an order for a retardant drop, which could slow the fire's progress, but not put it out (see related story, page 25).

"Fire behavior had increased and I knew access and containment would be a challenge," she said. "Retardant was not available through dispatch. Resource availability was limited due to multiple fires in the area."

That meant that the fire was burning unchecked — just as another fire in the area was uncoiling in a dangerous run toward homes on Lower Bridge Road.

"During the afternoon of August 12, winds picked up around (1:30 p.m.), causing embers from Whychus Fire to cross containment lines resulting in a two-mile-long narrow fire heading toward Lower Bridge and Holmes roads with multiple private inholdings," Reed
