

Lady Outlaws tally second straight win on soccer pitch

The Lady Outlaws posted their second league win of the season last week, with a 3-0 shutout at home over the visiting Newport Cubs. After five straight losses, the two-win streak was a boost to the squad.

Sisters dominated play for most of the game against the Cubs, and played in their half for most of the contest.

The Outlaws got their first goal at the 14-minute mark off a beautiful shot from Gracen Sundstrom that bent the far post and went around the goalie from about 20 yards out. Sisters played extremely well, and took numerous shots at the goal. The second goal came in the 39th minute. Emma Lutz played a great ball with her head that cleared over the defensive line, and forward Anya Shockley got the ball, took two dribbles, and blasted a shot past the keeper. At the half, the Outlaws were on top 2-0.

Sisters kept pressure on the Cubs, and continued to play in their half of the field. Sundstrom scored Sisters' final goal in the second half. Hallie Schwartz played the ball deep in the box where Lutz missed on her opportunity, but Gracen was in the right spot, and hit an amazing first-time volley that dipped over the keeper and into the back of the net for the score.

Coach Jaron Jacobsen told The Nugget that it was the team's best performance so far this season, and made particular note of freshman Emma Lutz.

"Emma had a tremendous game for us," said Jacobsen. "She was aggressive the whole night, and had two assists."

Jacobsen said that the Outlaws improve with each game, and are playing great soccer right now. He had praise for the Outlaws' defensive back line, which played a big part in the back-to-back wins.

Sisters was to play at Cascade on Tuesday, October 2. The Outlaws will face Woodburn at home on Thursday.

RODEO QUEEN: Rider performed on 4-year-old gelding described her older sister as a person of excellent character. "She is kind, caring and always putting everyone else first. She means the world to me," Jenna expressed.

The Cornett family began attending Sisters Rodeo when Riann was six, dressed in pink flannel, cowboy boots and a "very tiny straw hat." She was thrilled by the events of rodeo, and especially liked watching the queens in the grand entry and seeking their autographs later. She knew then that she was going to be in that romantic group of rodeo queens someday.

With her efforts in 4H and FFA, exhibiting horses, goats and pigs, Riann developed skills for a future in horse competitions. She also got over her almost disabling shyness about speaking in front of crowds.

"Riann was so terrified of speaking publicly," her father noted. "FFA taught her the skills to be able to do that with confidence. She has come full circle from a childhood at Sisters Rodeo to now being in a leadership position as the queen."

Rodeo queens are chosen by a panel of judges who interview each candidate with a list of questions. The candidates then present their prepared speeches to a crowd of rodeo guests.

After the speeches, they take their horses into the arena to ride a designated pattern that shows the skills and communication between the horse and rider in a series of figure eights at fast and slow canters. The horse must also stop, stand still and back with consistency. Finally, a rider demonstrates her handling of her horse running at high speed around the arena, with the classic rodeo wave to the crowd.

In the last challenge, the candidate carries a flapping, noisy flag as she gallops her mount around the oval a second time. Riann's 4-year-old sorrel gelding, Tequila, performed like a mature, seasoned horse on Sunday, despite his youth.

"To me, being Sisters Rodeo Queen is the equivalent of being Miss Rodeo Oregon," said Riann. "I am so thrilled to represent Sisters."
