

Film showing to spark conversation

In an often-strident climate where people — even friends and neighbors — seem to talk at or past each other on difficult social, political and cultural issues, Steve Stratos is hoping to spark a community conversation.

The pastor at Sisters Community Church is working with Sisters Movie House to offer a free showing of the classic drama “12 Angry Men,” followed by a discussion session. The showing is set for Wednesday, November 14, at 7 p.m. and free admittance is offered to the first 90 people who show up.

Stratos is hoping that that turnout will represent a cross-section of the community.

“The goal is to, initially, get some of our church folks to reach out to their neighbors,” he said.

12 Angry Men is a taut jury-room drama that reflects how interactions between people can quickly rise to conflict that may or may not have anything to do with the issue at hand.

“Following the closing arguments in a murder trial, the 12 members of the jury must deliberate, with a guilty verdict meaning death for the accused, an inner-city teen. As the dozen men try to reach a unanimous decision while sequestered in a room, one juror casts considerable doubt on elements of the case. Personal issues soon rise to the surface, and conflict threatens to derail the delicate process that will decide one boy’s fate.”

The film screening is part of an effort by Stratos and members of Sisters Community Church to reach beyond the church community, to overcome any sense of exclusion and to engage with the broader community.

The church plans to host other film screenings and talks with local authors and other creatives, “just to have conversations that are not hostile, that are not filled with all kinds of judgments and presumptions.”
