

AWARDS:

Awards honored going above and beyond

District's annual awards banquet at FivePine Lodge and Conference Center.

"Your great generosity has a large and lasting impact on our community," keynote speaker and fire district board member Chuck Newport told the assembled fire crews and their families.

Fellow board member Jack McGowan noted that such impacts reverberate across the state.

"You act in Sisters and think as an Oregonian," he said.

Fire Chief Roger Johnson and Deputy Chief Tim Craig recounted a year of heavy activity, from fire incidents to significant training operations — which included a Women's Fire Academy, ongoing work with an introductory fire service program at Sisters High School, and a major multi-agency active-threat drill.

The active-threat drill held at Sisters High School, had particular value and provided the district and its partners with new capabilities.

"It's incredible the amount of information that was gained with this," Craig said.

Firefighters and others were recognized for saving two lives from sudden cardiac arrest.

Firefighter and paramedic Matt Millar was named Career Firefighter of the Year.

for his extraordinary efforts in helping a patient with significant and challenging needs with whom the district has had repeated interactions find appropriate care in the medical system. Several district officers noted that his efforts — some on his own time — exceeded even the district's high standards for extraordinary effort in service to the community.

Craig made a special point of saluting the Fire Corps volunteers who serve as an auxiliary for the district.

"These folks put in an extraordinary amount of time to support the operations of the district," he said.
