

Folk duo plays in Sisters

Mike Biggers and Jim Cornelius will bring their Americana folk music to two Sisters venues this month.

The duo will play at Chops Bistro on Saturday, April 13, from 6 to 8 p.m. and at Cork Cellars on Saturday, April 20, at 6:30 p.m.

Biggers and Cornelius are part of The Anvil Blasters, and Biggers also plays with Dry Canyon Stampede.

"We enjoy playing as a duo, swapping songs we both love from people like Guy Clark, Steve Earle, John Prine — and our own material," Cornelius said. "Mike and I have probably a couple hundred songs in common, and we like to go to the well."

Chops is located at 370 E.

Artist will share book at Paulina Springs

Paul Alan Bennett will share his new book, "Night Skies," at Paulina Springs Books on Friday, April 19, at 6:30 p.m.

Bennett has combined a lifelong fascination with the night sky — which he has depicted often in his art — and his love for Greek mythology in "Night Skies," which features 44 paintings with text.

Bennett has been painting the night sky for years, some of the paintings inspired by long drives across Central Oregon, with the headlights probing the vault of the heavens.

"It's part of our landscape, just like the mountains, the rivers, the trails," he said.

Greek myths, which

Bennett became enamored with during his art studies in Greece as a young man, also play into the narrative of "Night Skies."

The Greeks threw their mythology into the skies and named the constellations that we know today.

"It's all quite wondrous, I think," Bennett said.

Bennett's appearance at Paulina Springs is part of a planned tour of Oregon bookstores in support of "Night Skies" — with the author/artist playing related original songs on his ukulele, yet another of his artistic passions.

Paulina Springs is located at 252 W. Hood Ave. For more information call 541-549-0866.
