SPRD executive director search continues

By Sue Stafford
Correspondent

The Board of Directors of Sisters Park & Recreation was delighted with their choice for the new executive director. Stacey Sommerfield from Pennsylvania was their top choice and contract negotiations were well underway. She was expected to arrive by mid-June.

Board chair Jeff Tryens told The Nugget, “We thought we had an agreement, and she (Sommerfield) decided to take another position.”

She apparently received an offer from another organization she couldn't turn down. She had already announced to her current employer and city that she had accepted the position in Sisters.

Sommerfield's change of mind left the Board considering their options when the opportunity arose that one of the Board's other top candidates, who had withdrawn from consideration, is now available and will continue the interview process with them. More should be known in the next couple of weeks.

In the meantime, interim executive Courtney Snead will remain at the helm and will stay on for a period of time after the new executive arrives.
