

The Nugget to launch Celebrate! magazine

This fall, The Nugget will publish the first edition of a new magazine-format publication that honors the triumphs and achievements of the vigorous and accomplished people who call Central Oregon their home.

Celebrate! Abundant Living in Central Oregon tells the stories of milestones achieved and obstacles overcome, of awards and honors earned in the arts, athletics, and service to the community. From a junior rodeo champion to a lifetime-achievement award for an auto racer; from the decades-long effort to restore Whychus Creek to major business anniversaries, Celebrate! seeks to... well...

celebrate the full and vivid lives built by the people who make this special place so special.

In addition to engaging and uplifting storytelling from award-winning writers, Celebrate! will also be a resource guide for creating your own celebrations and marking your own milestones — from weddings to retirements, from arts events to happy holidays.

The abundant life of Central Oregon gives us so much to celebrate, The Nugget invites readers to join in sharing and spreading the joy.

For more information, contact The Nugget at 541-549-9941.

Scottie peacemakers

Peacemakers are uncommon spirits. They are even rarer in Scottie-dogs; but we have been blessed; we've lived with two. Before Harry and Lola, the first pair of rescued Scotties that came to live in our home, we had enjoyed five previous Scotties that we had acquired as puppies.

One of the first things that struck me about Harry and Lola was the uniqueness of their relationship. Harry was two years younger than Lola but much bigger than her. Yet, Harry always deferred to Lola's needs and wants. It wasn't fear-based supplication. It was love and respect, and it was amazing to watch.

Anytime food was offered to the dogs, Harry would wait to be sure Lola

Airshow features warbirds, drones

By Jim Cornelius
Editor in Chief

Many folks from Sisters will be making the trek up to Madras on August 23-24 to take in one of the most spectacular air shows in the West at the Airshow of the Cascades.

Hundreds of planes of all types will be part of the show, including about 30 flyable World War II warbirds — types that were flown in air combat during D-Day operations in Normandy in 1944. Those planes are part of the Erickson Aircraft Collection. A partnership with the Erickson Aircraft Collection allows Airshow visitors free entry to their museum, which houses the largest privately owned collection of vintage warbirds in the world.

The airshow in Madras is a family event that is distinct from many other airshows across the West.

"Here it's more up-close," said Airshow board member Tom Brown. "You get to talk to the pilots; you get up close to the planes."

The Airshow of the Cascades has always been about more than planes. The show started when local rancher and vintage plane enthusiast Ron Ochs invited friends to fly in to his ranch in the late 1970s and '80s for a get-together and weekend party. They'd land on his hay field after the second cutting. Friends who didn't fly drove their fancy cars out to the ranch.

When the event moved to the Madras Airport to become Airshow of the Cascades in 2000, the car show came with it. Now there's also a motorcycle show and — new this year — a vintage bicycle show.

New technology gets a chance to shine, as well. There will be both daytime and nighttime choreographed drone flights. The day show is larger, but the new-this-year night show will be especially dramatic with lighting on the drones.
