Tekla Waterfield to take stage at The Open Door

By Ceili Cornelius

Seattle-based musician Tekla Waterfield will be performing her original songs Monday, December 2, at 6 p.m., at The Open Door Restaurant and Wine Bar.

Waterfield is originally from Alaska and grew up surrounded by music. Her mother used to play folk festivals around Alaska. From a young age, Waterfield was getting on stage with her mother and sister to perform harmonies and sing. In the 1990s, her family moved to California, near Sacramento, where Waterfield discovered many other genres of music that she loved.

“I listened to almost all folk and Americana music growing up, then discovered hip-hop and R&B and soul in the 90s and loved that style,” said Waterfield.

Waterfield credits her own style and sound to the music she grew up with.

“My music is mostly indie-folk with a touch of

SHE Project benefits Saving Grace

By Helen Schmidling

In some circumstances, women may have no place to turn for help: no friends, no family close by, no mentors, no job, and no resources. In Bend, Saving Grace, a women’s emergency shelter and support center, is often the proverbial “last straw.”

To drive home the message, 25 Central Oregon artists have created collages around a phrase starting with or focused on the word “SHE ...” that will be sold to benefit Saving Grace. For the past two months, the artists have worked on their projects, some crafting their own “SHE” phrases that reflect both the hopelessness of the situation, and the hope that comes from help.

From December 2 to 31, the art of the SHE Project will show at Good Day Café at Bedouin, 143 E. Hood Ave., Sisters. Owner Harmony Thomas will feature four of the pieces in an online auction, December 2 through 4, through Instagram (#Sisters.bedouin) and Facebook (@sistersbedouin). For the entire month, all of the pieces will be for sale at Bedouin, starting at $35, to benefit Saving Grace. During the opening event, Thomas said she would also feature a raffle for a $200 Hobo purse, and sale of T-shirts and other items, all in support of Saving Grace. Her goal is to raise $2,000 for the nonprofit.

Sisters artist Kit Stafford is coordinating this art event.

“All of the SHE projects were created or inspired from a quote or phrase in an effort to stop violence against women,” she said. “SHE ...” begins or factors into the thought as each artist created the piece. From Stafford:

“She learned to love herself and golden thoughts rained down on her...”
