Spring equinox brings balance

By T. Lee Brown
Correspondent

A handful of hardy celebrants kept social distance at Sisters Community Labyrinth on Thursday. They were treated to a short demonstration by Pat Leiser, who placed objects around the labyrinth to represent celestial objects in the solar system. A golden orb representing the sun sat on the labyrinth's center stone. Globes, apples, oranges, and shamrocks symbolized planets and the various locations of Earth during the year.

The official first day of spring in some Western cultures, vernal equinox marks a time of year when the days contain approximately an equal number of daylight and nighttime hours. Christian holidays including St. Patrick's Day and Easter are said to have descended from the ancient traditions of equinox.

A child led the walkers, ringing a Tibetan singing bowl. When everyone reached the labyrinth's center, they reflected on the strange times at hand. Grief and worry were expressed; so were hope and determination.

The Quarantine List – Nugget staff picks

The Nugget staff and freelancers are sharing some of their favorite stories and activities to help Sisters pass through the Quarantine of 2020:

On the screen:

- “Love is Blind”: Pure mind-numbing, sappy, unrealistic, but a great diversion with all kinds of twists and outcomes.

- “Story of God” & “The Story of Us,” hosted by Morgan Freeman: Both are informative, insightful and thought-provoking. There's a spiritual aspect, historical interest and Mr. Freeman's relaxed, inquisitive leadership throughout each episode.

- “Maya Angelou – And Still I Rise”: This stays on my favorite list and is a documentary that instills hope, appreciation for those who rise above extreme adversity and the freedom and joy found in eventual resiliency.

- “Invisible Essence – The Little Prince”: Featuring a variety of creative, smart people who explore the deeper meaning found in a children's book with adult-sized issues.

- Reruns of “Modern

McNairs navigate coronavirus abroad

By Charlie Kanzig
Correspondent

Anna (Summerfield) McNair and her husband Cailen have worked overseas as educators for years and have experienced their share of challenges and adventures at their stops over the past decade in Saudi Arabia, Russia, and China.

But nothing prepared them for the coronavirus and its impact on their lives in Seoul, South Korea, where they now live with their three children R.J, Cael, and Lucy.

The couple work at Seoul Foreign School, which was established in 1912 and has a population of approximately 1500 students K-12 from around the world. Anna, a 2000 graduate of Sisters High School, teaches second grade, while Cailen, who taught from 2006-2009 in the
