

Festival fundraising event to go online

Sisters Folk Festival (SFF) supports the arts, and this year during the COVID-19 pandemic the nonprofit organization will celebrate by going virtual for the My Own Two Hands Community Art Auction and Fundraiser that supports youth programming.

A silent auction is happening May 8-16. It's a way to offer up the art that was generously donated by local and regional artists. No purchase of tickets will be necessary to participate in the auction. Participants will simply be emailed a link to the online auction platform. Bids can easily be placed from the comfort and safety of home via cell phone or internet-connected device. SFF anticipates reaching a wider audience than ever before and encourages you to share the auction link when they send it out.

Each year a theme is chosen for My Own Two Hands

(MOTH) celebration of the arts. This year's theme, "A New Dawn," inspired artists to create and donate a piece of art to be sold at the benefit auction in support of music and arts programming in the Sisters schools and community.

Artist Janice Druian's oil painting, "Dawn's Early Light," was chosen as the image for the 2020 MOTH poster.

Crista Munro, SFF executive director, told The Nugget,

"Janice Druian's painting captures the MOTH theme perfectly. I love the way the morning light reflects along the top of the rock formations. But one of the most interesting things about this piece is that it shows us a different view of an iconic and much-celebrated landscape: Smith Rock. It suggests the possibility of finding beauty by looking at something in a new way or from a different angle, and that ties right back into the theme of a new dawn. Little did we know when we chose the theme and Janice's painting just how different things would be this spring, not only for Sisters Folk Festival and My Own Two Hands, but for life as we know it. The painting is a reminder to keep seeing things in a new light and to find beauty in the unfamiliar."

Smith Rock State Park has always been a favorite painting subject for Druian, a Terrebonne resident, and was

Thank You, Sisters Educators!

With the closure of Sisters schools for the rest of the year, and the cancellation of all school activities, students are moving online and into a strange new world. During this time, teachers, staff, students and their families and the community at large are all rallying to make the best of a profoundly challenging situation.

As Superintendent Curt Scholl says, "We will need patience, resilience, kindness and strength as we move through these next few months. We will learn a lot through this crisis, as we support one another and grow stronger together."

Seniors are particularly impacted, and The Nugget, along with the rest of the community, joins with Sisters High School Principal Joe Hosang in assuring them that, "Between the Senior Party committee, GRO, and our commencement ceremony committee, as well as others, we are going to do all we can to make things as good as we can for the class of 2020."

Outlaws are strong, Outlaws are resilient, Outlaws adapt and overcome.

In the words of Superintendent Scholl:
"We are in uncharted waters, but the school district has the right people to tackle this challenge."
