Cole Ranch Red Angus

If you enjoy the post-card-perfect, fence-side views at Cole Ranch, you're familiar with the beautiful Red Angus cattle who call it home.

This summer, a limited supply will be made available to locals as part of a beef-share program.

Raised with love and handled with compassion by awarded cattleman Riley Avery, these Certified Red Angus are fed on a diet of healthy heritage grasses, finished on regionally-sourced grains, grown without hormones or antibiotics, and never confined to a feedlot. State-of-the-art corrals promote a stress-free life, while a rotational grazing program ensures a healthy, happy home; all of which adds up to a finished product that tastes delicious.

If you're interested in a USDA-inspected grain- and/or grass-finished beef share from Cole Ranch, they come in eighth, quarter, half, or "The Whole Shebang." Call Riley at 541-279-1504, then stop by the ranch to select yours.

Two Spruce Law

Patricia Nelson and John Myers have opened a new Sisters office for Two Spruce Law, and John is ready to serve his new community.

A fifth-generation Oregonian, John moved to Sisters this year with his wife, Melissa, and dogs, Moose and Birdie. Through the Sisters office of Two Spruce Law, he offers estate-planning services for people in Sisters. Estate planning is a critical responsibility for a wide range of people. It's important to make your own plan with expert advice so that the state isn't making decisions for you. "Anyone who has kids should have an estate plan," John says.

People with over one million dollars in assets, including life insurance, should be making a plan to save on inheritance tax.

John is adept at identifying and understanding the complexities of family dynamics, and truly enjoys his role in the estate-planning process. He will help you create a customized, individual plan tailored to the needs of your family.
