represents a return to live music, and a celebration of what makes Sisters Folk Festival special. All seven venues will be outdoors; some are tented with ventilated sides. The SFF organization has updated its COVID-19 safety policy to require proof of COVID vaccination for all festival staff, artists, production crews, patrons, vendors, and volunteers. Additionally, capacity at venues will be reduced and the festival will comply with any other local or state mandates in place at the time of the event.

The same safety policy will apply to the 2021 Americana Song Academy, which takes place four days prior to the festival at a new location in Camp Sherman. The House on Metolius is a historic home with cabins overlooking the Metolius River Basin and the Cascade Mountains. Organizers note that it is a wonderful location to inspire musical creativity and connection to the natural beauty for which Camp Sherman is known.

This year's academy setting will create a more intimate experience with just 50 participants and nine instructors and will allow participants to work more closely on their craft with festival teaching artists. Instructors for 2021 include Mary Gauthier, Willy Porter, Emily Scott Robinson, Thunderstorm Artis, Ordinary Elephant, Robby Hecht, Alisa Amador, Dennis McGregor and Beth Wood. The Americana Song Academy will run Monday, September 27 through Thursday, September 30.

Longtime local favorites The Haymakers have reunited to perform at the Sisters Folk Festival.

Space is extremely limited and close to selling out.

Tickets to the Sisters Folk Festival are on sale now, with single-day passes offered beginning on September 1. For those wishing to volunteer for their ticket, a variety of volunteer shifts are open for set-up, take-down, merchandise sales, patron check-in, bar, and more. For more information on all SFF programs, including tickets, lineup, and volunteering, visit www.sistersfolkfestival.org.
