Sisters foundation helping Blue River heal

“For Sale” signs are abundant throughout the McKenzie River Valley town of Blue River, in the wake of the devastating Holiday Farm Fire that tore through the valley on Labor Day 2020, burning 144,000 acres. The steep hills on either side of Blue River, once covered in timber, now host blackened tree skeletons, devoid of any life.

Miraculously, thanks to the amazing work of firefighters, McKenzie High School was spared. Residents who were unable to evacuate were instructed to go to the center of the football field where they were sprayed by fire hoses to protect them from the advancing fire. It is estimated that of the almost 200 students in K-12 in the district, 153 were displaced following the fire, with

Resource guide available for Sisters

A self-help resource guide for Sisters Country is now available.

The vision for the Sisters Country Resource Guide began back in 2016 and was inspired by NeighborImpact’s “Answer Book,” a self-help guide to agencies and services in Crook, Deschutes, and Jefferson Counties.

Thanks to a collaboration between Citizens4Community (C4C), Central Oregon Intergovernmental Council (COIC), Xpress Printing, and some dedicated locals, the guide is finally here for the community. It is organized into sections for housing, food access, services, and general resources. It’s broken down further with subsections like childcare, legal services, and pets, and also includes information for things like applying for housing vouchers, food bank days and times, and free or discounted services that aren’t widely advertised.

There are waterproof copies available for neighbors vulnerable to the elements. Translated copies are also available for Spanish-speaking community members. The next version will come out in early 2022 and will be updated yearly to ensure it accurately reflects available resources.

Seeking donations for Skate Park expansion

By Ceili Cornelius

Daniel O’Neill, a Sisters High School teacher, is teaching young people the culture of skateboarding – not just how to be a better skater, but the life lessons that can be learned from getting into skateboarding.

O’Neill is instructing a class this year at the high school called Skatepark. The skatepark class is offered to anyone who skates, and those who want to be involved in furthering the building project on the Sisters Skate Park located next to Sisters High School.

Sawyer Kiefer, one of the students in the class said, “We all really liked skateboarding and wanted to get into a class to learn how to build something that we can skate on.”

The skate park has been in use since 2010 after being
