The Unbroken Thread

From now until Oct. 31 the past and present are blended beautifully in the exhibit at the Lane County Pioneer Museum called The Unbroken Thread. This lovely show was put together by the Pioneer Quilters, a local group interested in quilting history and techniques.

There are quilts from the 1800s and early 1900s, through the twenties and thirties and up to the present. The art of quilting is alive and well and exciting — from the traditional star patterns to the art nouveau flowers. There are large poinsettias, Christmas wreaths, "crazy quilts" (made from dressmaker's remnants, sequins and beads in no pattern), large squares with embroidery within each square, 625 small squares sewn into one quilt and an incredible cloth version of a stained glass window by John Tiffany entitled Pumpkins and Beets in yellows, oranges, mauves and deep purples.

The quilts are lying on the buggies, stage coaches and furniture displays and hang from the high walls for excellent viewing. Not to be missed are pieces in glass cases in the middle of the room. They are works in progress called "Friendship Blocks" which are the beginning of a 2 1/2 year project which will result in 32 quilts, each with a different theme.

I talked with a quilter as I was leaving. She had been out of town and was looking forward to getting back into a project — often one person makes the squares and another quilts them. They share their skills and have fun too. Stop at the Museum (740 W. 13th) for a real treat. Hours: 10-4 pm daily.
