The 1983 Oregon Writing Project Summer Institute will be held June 21 to July 15. Several partial scholarships, worth up to $250, are available for writing teachers who want to improve their own writing and their teaching of writing, as well as to plan writing in-service activities. Enrollment, limited to 25, is open to teachers at any grade. Tuition is $360 for 6 hours and $540 for nine hours of graduate credit. For application forms and more information, call 686-3982 or 686-3911.

Become a Trained Master Food Preserver
—Learn to answer questions on up-to-date and safe methods of storing and preserving food. Lane Extension has openings for volunteers who want to learn to teach, give demonstrations and answer phone calls on basic canning, drying and freezing food. Anyone interested in applying for the weekly training sessions in May should contact Lane Extension no later than April 25, 687-4243. Call Monday through Thursday between 10-12 noon and 1-4 pm.

The UO has developed higher quality academic programs in the arts and sciences per state tax dollar than any other major public university in the country. In striking contrast is the university's ranking for level of state support per student. The university receives $1,821 per student—only 4 other universities are funded at a lower rate per student than Oregon is. President Paul Olum attributes the university's success "to the dedication of faculty, staff and the help of many volunteers, and to the quality of life on campus and the collegiality among the faculty."

There is a support group forming for women with concerns about their personal bouts with anorexia and/or bulimia. For more information, call Janet, 484-6056, or Suzy, 683-7138.

Coop Childcare is an excellent how-to booklet by Sonja Ungemach (a partner in Eugene's weekly What's Happening). In an easy-to-read style Sonja details the steps to forming and running your own cooperative preschools, babysitting co-ops, and playgroups. The 32-page book is $1.95 plus 75¢ postage/handling per copy from Common Marketing, Box 1906, Eugene, OR 97440.

Friends of the Lane Community College Library will celebrate National Library Week with an open house on Thursday, April 21, 2:30-4 pm, at the LCC Library. A film, "Quilts in Women's Lives," displays of new books and refreshments will be featured. The public is invited.

The Eugene YWCA needs your old books and magazines for their spring book sale. Bring your donations to the YWCA at 841 E 18th, or phone 686-4439 to have your books picked up.

The University of Oregon, in conjunction with Lane Memorial Blood Bank, will be holding a two-day blood drive May 3 and 4 (Tues & Weds). 10 am-4 pm, Room 167, of the Erb Memorial Union.
