Ceramic Showcase '83

The finest new work of Oregon Potters Cooperative members will be exhibited in Portland next week, including work by local potters Julie Reisner and Michael Keenen of Eugene and Gil Harrison of Cottage Grove. Julie and Michael have both studied in Japan. Gil, a full time potter for 12 years, has begun doing larger "decorator items," and was recently commissioned by the Benson Hotel in Portland to create large ceramics for seven special suites.

Virtually every major technique in the field will be represented in the show. Nationally prominent artists like Frank Boyden (raku), Geoffrey Pagen (Reed College), Patrick Horsley, Tom and Elaine Coleman of Canby, Oregon will be present, in addition to other acclaimed artists.

Marlene Gabel, Director of Contemporary Crafts Gallery of Portland, after traveling through much of the U.S., said, "It is always exciting to return to Oregon where some of the most significant work in the ceramic world is being done." She adds, "More and more the line between fine art and craft is disappearing, and this is evidenced in the individuality of Oregon potters. Many Northwest potters have been working in their field 12-20 years, and the quality and expertise indicate the beginning of a golden period as master craftspeople perform their most exciting work."

The show is next Friday (11 am-9 pm) and Saturday (10 am-6 pm), April 29 and 30 at the Western Forestry Center, 4033 S.W. Canyon Rd., Portland. Call Gil Harrison for further information, 942-2071.
