The Black Bag Project is comprised of a small group of people with a collection of health tools (blood pressure cuffs, speculum, otoscope), books and information. They are interested in helping you to learn more about your body, to take control of your health and to promote community self-reliance. Right now the books and tools are stored in a closet and they are looking for ideas and inspiration from people who are interested in the self-care concept. They are holding a public meeting on Aug 2 at 7:30 pm in the Eugene Library. See calendar for details.

Laurie Kovack will be Weaver-in-Residence at the Campbell Senior Center Thursdays and Fridays during the month of August. Kovack, a weaver participating in the Lane Regional Arts Council's Artists-in-Education Program, will introduce class participants to the possibilities of the woven medium. Discussions involving contemporary, historical and cultural traditions of textiles will be combined with hands-on experiences through all the stages of weaving. The content of the workshop will be based on the interest and experience of participants. For more information call the Campbell Center at 687-5310.

The Oregon State University Extension Service has plans available for two moderately priced passive solar homes designed specifically for the Pacific Northwest. One is a two-level 1,530 square foot house featuring a solar greenhouse in which heating cost might be cut in half compared to a similar conventional house in Eugene. The other is a 1,000 square foot house featuring direct heat gain through south facing windows. Heating costs might be cut two-thirds compared to a conventional house. Catalogs describing the house plans are available without charge from the Lane County office of the OSU Extension Service. The catalogs also provide information on building sites, comparison of heating costs, design, starting a building project, and on ordering construction drawings. The plans and booklet were prepared for the Extension Service by Oregon Appropriate Technology in Eugene under contract with the U.S. Dept. of Energy.

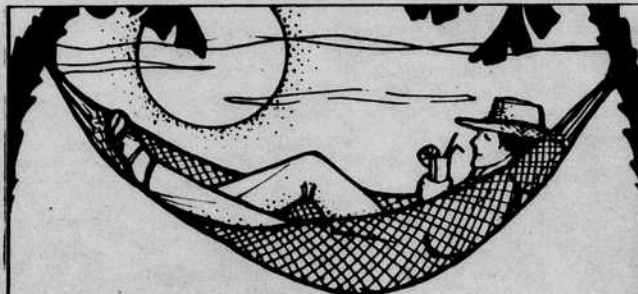

The Lane Regional Arts Council is providing a free service to help Lane County residents locate and hire visual and performing artists. The Find the Artists program uses information provided directly by professional artists, and offers ideas and advice to persons interested in employing them. Find the Artists combines two ongoing Arts Council services. The Visual Artists Slide Bank contains slides of work created by local artists and craftspeople. The Performing Artists Referral Files highlight the talents of Lane County's musicians, dancers, actors and circus performers. A summary of each artist's training, experience, exhibits or performances, reviews and fee range is provided. All artists have been interviewed by LRAC staff. Phone or visit the Arts Council at 795 Willamette St, Room 416; 485-2278.
