Next Week: Special Edition

Next week's edition of What's Happening (March 14) will feature two full weeks of arts, events and entertainment instead of the usual one week.

As is our custom, we plan a special two-week edition to coincide with Spring Break at the university and public schools. This year's two-week issue also happens to coincide with the Irish Festival.

Watch for this special green edition next Thursday for Irish Festival information.

Announcements from Irish Festival

Street banners for the 3rd Annual Irish Festival are now available to businesses and service groups in the Eugene/Springfield area. The banners, which display the group or company name, will hang along the Irish Festival parade route in downtown Eugene, or along South A and Main in Springfield, from March 7 to 22. Banner sales help to support the privately funded festival. Call Lee Johnson, 343-1491, or Joan Zimmerman, 747-9897, to purchase one.

Merchants or craftspersons interested in selling Irish related products during the Festival may purchase table space for $10. Tables will be located in the lobby of the Eugene Conference Center on Saturday, March 17, from 10 am-8:30 pm. Call Gill Shaw at 485-3541 or 747-4815 for more information.

Turn Green This Spring

Are you a Green? If you're reading this publication, there's a good chance you are a Green, even if you don't yet know what being a Green means. What it means is being a member of, or on the same wavelength as, the growing Green Movement, which is rapidly spreading worldwide from its West European origin. The following is a statement from the Federal Program of the West German Green Party: "We represent a total concept, as opposed to the one-dimensional, still-more-production brand of politics. Our policies are guided by long-term visions for the future and are founded on four basic principles: ecology, social responsibility, grassroots democracy, and nonviolence." If these ideals strike a chord in you, you are a Green.

Green ideas have been around in the United States for a long time. Many of you may have read Ecotopia, by Ernest Callenbach, or New Age Politics, by Mark Satin. Both of these books, written in the 1970's, are full of home-grown Green ideas. A new book by American authors Fritjof Capra and Charlene Spretnak, titled Green Politics, details the West German Green experience and discusses ways to put Green ideas to work more effectively in the United States.

Andreas Muller, a Green Party city council member from West Germany, is tentatively scheduled to speak in the EMU Building on the U of O campus at 7 pm on Monday, March 11. He will speak on the German Green Party, and will explore ways Green ideas can be translated into action in the United States, locally and nationally. A discussion will follow. Call Scott Leckie, 683-9528, or Ted Gies, 345-7212, for the room number.

Also forming in Eugene is a Green Movement study and planning group. We will be studying the Green vision and similar concepts and will begin working out a program for local action on these ideas. Since we're all affected by State and Federal policies as well as the local ones, we'll also be working on programs for increasing grassroots input into the formulation of these policies. We'll be talking with a cross-section of local people to clarify the changes people would like to see. Please come; call Ted Gies, 345-7212, for the time and location of the initial meeting.
