The best way to see the news
is to hear it.

Any radio or television news program will give you the news. "Morning Edition" makes the news come alive. Alive with the voices, cries and comments of people at the scene, where the news is happening.

What's more, "Morning Edition" gives you the information you need to start your day. The local news. The weather. The traffic report.

Plus, you'll hear the latest sports news, often from the athletes themselves on the playing fields, courts and courses of the world. And in our extensive coverage of the arts, you'll hear people who express themselves creatively, express themselves to you.

So when you really want to see the news, listen to National Public Radio's Bob Edwards on "Morning Edition." It's radio worth every minute.
