Lloyd Jones Struggle, Razorbacks at Taylor's

by Dennis Fitzgerald

Portland's soulful guitarist, vocalist and songwriter, Lloyd Jones, will appear Friday and Saturday nights, June 12 and 13, at Taylor's Tavern. Lloyd is riding high on the wave of critical acclaim his new album has garnered. The record is entitled The Lloyd Jones Struggle, which is also the name of his band. Anyone who is a regular listener to Gavin "The Rooster Man" Fox's Saturday afternoon Blues Power show on KLCC is by now familiar with Lloyd's new work. It is much requested on that most popular of Willamette Valley blues programs.

The record has received solid support from other experts as well. One of Portland's venerable record stores, Music Millennium, used a cut from the disk as the background track for their radio ad. Rockport Records, another important Portland area record outlet, recently pointed out in their newsletter that The Lloyd Jones Struggle was outselling Robert Cray's latest release at their store.

Another endorsement of the work is expected in the coming months from one of the most important musician's periodicals in the country. Guitar Player Magazine sent staff members to catch their live act at Cisco and Poncho's, a posh Portland nightclub. They expressed strong approval of the work and indicated a review is coming soon.

Getting good reviews and endorsements is a great way to begin, but in order to keep record sales growing, the Lloyd Jones Struggle has lately spent a lot of time on the road. Last month they played across southern Oregon and Northern California, including stops in Eureka and Arcadia. They also managed to sneak in gigs with Chicago-area great, Charlie Musselwhite, in Portland, Corvallis and Ashland. Over the summer, the band will head for dates in San Francisco, then north to Canada.

The Lloyd Jones Struggle will bring their original brand of funky blues to Taylor's stage at 9:30 pm; admission will be $2 at the door.

Portland's rock 'n' roll power-trio, The Razorbacks, will appear at Taylor's June 11.

The Razorbacks have received critical acclaim for their recently released LP, More Love, Less Attitude. The album, produced by Quarterflash drummer Brian David Willis, features such Portland-area luminaries as Andy Stokes, of the popular funk band Cool'R and the horn players of the Crazy 8's. Reviewer Stuart Thomlinson of The Oregonian said of More Love, Less Attitude, "The band's rendition of 'Blues Ain't Nothin,' with Miller shining . . . on both the vocal and guitar parts, tightens the Razorbacks' hold on the title as the most compelling rock trio in these parts. . . ."

When performing live, the Razorbacks—guitarist Chris Miller, bassist J. Michael Kearsey and drummer Jeff Hudis—use a combination of rhythm and blues, rock-a-billy, thrash-rock and blues. This variety of danceable styles has made the band a long-time favorite in Portland and throughout the Northwest.

Showtime will be 9:30 pm; admission will be $2 at the door. Taylor's is at 13th Avenue and Kincaid Street, across from the U of O campus.
