

Louis Hanson and Joseph Jackson are polite, faithful little orderlies. They have been with Miss Gaither since school began. Both improve their spare time in study.

There is a noticeable improvement in recitations given at the Assembly by students of the upper grades, and their subjects are well chosen. The lower grades have also given some fine quotations. At some time we hope to hear from all grades.

One of the happiest little faces on our campus is that of Vasili Willie Alexander, a 6-year-old, who arrived from Latouche Island, Alaska, a few days ago. Superintendent Wadsworth met him in Seattle when he landed from the boat. He is a constant companion of the Superintendent.

Misses Hall and McComber, two of our academic teachers, left us March 1. We regret to lose them from our school as both are excellent teachers. Miss Hall has been substituting since January 1; she left to look after her valuable timber claim. Miss McComber resigned to take up other work.

A very pleasing as well as an interesting sight is to watch Donald Fulkerson, Lowry Wadsworth and Robert Douglas, at play on the lawns. They are three, four and five years old. Each owns a velocipede. To watch them riding on the walks is indeed an amusing and interesting sight. It would be hard to find three brighter little chaps.

One of the rooms in the academic building has been arranged for a library, to which the students have access at stated periods during the day. Through the efforts of Supt. Wadsworth and girls of the Y. W. C. A. the library has been supplied with a number of the best magazines. Supt. Wadsworth has subscribed for good daily papers and will furnish good books from time to time.

March may be characterized as the month of debates, for three public debates are scheduled for that month. First will be the Nonpariel-Excelsior debate on the thirteenth. The Reliance have produced two teams, one to meet the Winonas, and another to cross oratorical swords with the Excelsiors. The questions chosen are up-to-date. The rivalry between the societies is intense and there is no doubt that these debates will prove interesting and profitable.

Supt. Wadsworth has been successful in excess of legitimate expectation in the task of filling up the school with pupils. Nor is this the only count wherein he has done excellent work in behalf of Chemawa—he has succeeded in securing money for many improvements to the various industrial plants of the school, and in many of these substantial improvements and additions to the equipment have been made. Numerous splendid features are already pledged us in the near future, making it plain to all that Supt. Wadsworth is "the right man in the right place."
