
WASHINGTON AND LINCOLN PROGRAM

Our students, under the direction of the academic teachers, prepared and rendered an excellent and appropriate Washington-Lincoln program during the week of February 22nd. The students, one and all, acquitted themselves, most creditable, to the satisfaction of everybody. The showing made by the students on this occasion was a credit, not only to those taking part, but their instructors as well. Were it not a trifle in violation of the ethics of newspaperdom we should like to indulge in a little "personal mention," but this is not the place to do so.

We sometimes wonder how many of our students realize the swift passing of the years, one after another? The best efforts of a fine corps of instructors are devoted to the students of Chemawa in order that they may receive the ground-work of an education which will prove of greater and greater value to them as year succeeds year. We admonish our young people to make the utmost of every opportunity, day by day, that in the years to come when they feel themselves unequal to conditions and circumstances which may stare them in the face they will not look back to their school days at Chemawa and ask themselves, "Why did I waste my time?"

Regrets are usually of no avail—they buy nothing, and aside from indicating a change in one's mental attitude, stand for nothing. Let our students endeavor, by their earnestness and application during their school days, to escape future self-arraignment and vain regrets.

EXCELSIORS

The Excelsior Literary Society has been doing fine work in the past month. All the members of our society are taking a great deal of interest in Society work, which in the future will tell results. Since the last report was published in the American we have elected new officers, as follows:

We have a new pennant, with a purple background and golden letters. Our old member, Harry W. Jones, a member of our debating team, designed the letters and then turned it over to another of our team, Gideon Hanbury, who put the finishing touch to our now most beautiful Excelsior pennant. We mean to defend it, too.
