

dresses, and uniform skirts for the new children as they come in.

The girls are all getting along very nicely making new gingham dresses and uniform skirts.

New members have come into the dressmaking department to learn dressmaking and we are pleased to see that they are succeeding. We, the dressmakers, extend our thanks to Miss Brown for the pains she takes in teaching us how to sew.

THIS truth comes to us more and more the longer we live: That on what field or in what uniform or with what aims we do our duty, matters very little, or even what our duty is. Great or small, splendid or obscure. Only to find our duty certainly, and somewhere, somehow, to do it faithfully, makes us good, strong, happy and useful men, and tunes our lives into some feeble echo of the life of God.

EXCELSIOR LITERARY SOCIETY

The Excelsior Literary Society convened on Thursday, Oct. 9, 1913, with an enrollment of forty-nine members; about two thirds of these are new members. The members all seem enthusiastic, and we expect to do better work this term than ever before.

The meeting was conducted by Chairman Ray White, with Reginald Downie as his secretary. An entirely new staff of officers was elected. The staff is as follows: Reginald Downie, President; Andy Walker, Vice-President; Frank Johnson, Secretary; Ruther Jacobs, Treasurer; Gideon Hanbury, Sergeant-at-Arms; his assistant, Charles Johnson; William Ready, Reporter. This election was followed with an address by our new Critic, Mr. Devoll. His address was instructive and interesting, also encouraging to our society and was followed by the hearty applause of all the members. Business was then called for; since there was nothing of great importance, Chairman Ray White called on different members to speak. This was followed by a motion for adjournment which was seconded.

Come and join us, and you will come out at the end of the term a wise man, knowing something about public speaking.

Come and hear the Excelsior String Orchestra play, with Mr. Alex Melevidov as director.

The Excelsior Society has lost a very good friend and supporter, who has done more for the society and aroused the most enthusiasm among
