

Mr. Mitchell and his detail of boys are trimming and mulching the rosebeds about the grounds. Many of the roses are blooming yet.

The patients at the hospital, and the nurses, were duly thankful for their excellent dinner on Thanksgiving Day. The meal was served in courses. First there was tomato soup with crackers. After the soup bowls were removed, chicken, salad, potatoes, gravy, bread, butter and apples were brought on. With smiles and pleasant conversation the time passed and the dishes were emptied. Then came ice cream, cake, and coffee. At 5 P. M. supper, consisting of pie, cookies, candy and nuts, was served. The day was filled with blessings. At evening all patients that were able to do so attended the dance, which lasted until 10:30.

The harness shop has a new harness-making machine and a new shoe-making machine. The work on leather can now be done much faster than when we sewed by hand. The six boys who are learning the trade of harness-making are Archie Freestone, of Montana; Joe Gale, of California; George Williams, of Alaska; Leander Parr, Ralph Farrow and Henry Elk, of Pendleton, Oregon. We Pendleton boys all mean to have a shop of our own some day when we have learned the trade. I am making a bridle that will soon be finished. I like the trade. We have twenty or thirty sets of harness completed in the shop. Leander Parr has just made a headstall for his horse. When Abraham Shawaway was here he worked in the harness-shop. Last summer he made a set of harness for his horses at home. Jesse Scowlale, who works in the shoe shop, is a good shoe maker. He is from Yakima, Wash.

In a game of football on Thanksgiving the Alaska Seals went against the Washington clam diggers and Oregon web-footers, who were assisted by men from some of the other northwestern states. Part of the time a hard rain was falling but the players, in their enthusiasm, payed no attention. Fred Lewis and Gideon Hanbury were quarter-backs for the seals. Fred was out of practice for he has not played the game since he left Chemawa in 1910, but he showed that he had been a star. Louis Paul was the center, and a good one at that. George Nix and Frank Patrovich were the end men. The seals were defeated 26 to 0. It is believed that if the clam diggers and web-footers alone had played the seals the latter would have won.

6th

Mr. N. C. Jorgensen, one of the well known fruit growers of the Willamette Valley, is shipping his crop of choice apples to San Francisco. Mr. Jorgensen's apple ranch is often visited by the students who are interested in watching the growing fruit.