
EXCELSIOR LITERARY SOCIETY

On February 26, 1914, the Excelsior Literary Society held its meeting in the Academic Building. The roll was called by the Secretary; the minutes were read; and the society proceeded with old and new business. A motion was made and seconded that a new program committee be elected: Nick Orloff, Andrew Brown, Philip Rees; and Charles Johnson was elected reporter. Short speeches were made by the new officers who stated that they would all do their best.

The following program was rendered on March 5, 1914: Opening address, Ben Bearchild; Recitation, Harry Busby; Reading, Frank Campbell; Cornet and Saxophone duet by F. Peratrovich and Clyde Fields.

We were glad to have the Nonpariel Society for our visitors. A short speech was made by the secretary of the Nonpariels. Mr. E. A. Smith, who was one of our visitors, also gave a good talk on society work.

A few remarks were made by our critic, Mr. Devol. With his aid we shall make our society a credit to the school, for each member is working hard to improve the organization as a whole.—CHARLES JOHNSON, Reporter.
