

the visitors most of the students who had assembled for the morning services had to leave the Auditorium. Credit is due the ushers and officers on this occasion for the orderly manner in which all moved from the building—so quietly was this done that the change was scarcely noticeable. The crowd increased to such proportions that the big Gym had to be fitted up for the afternoon session. The Gym had been used as a dining hall for the visitors, consequently it was no easy matter to get it in readiness in such a short time. The boys, under the supervision of their disciplinarian, Mr. Smith, went to work in earnest—moved out the tables, gathered up chairs and benches from all departments, and within a short time the place was in readiness. The boys were courteous, willing and faithful. Many nice remarks were heard from visitors about the polite Chemawa boys. The success of the convention in many ways was due to the willing work of the boys.
