

Mrs. J. L. Johnson arrived at Chemawa since our last issue and is now thoroughly indentified as one of us. She came here from Montana. We extend her a cordial welcome and trust that she may like it here.

Joseph Teabo came over from his home in Grande Ronde lately and visited with friends. Mr. Teabo is the same genial fellow as of old, but he has not enjoyed very good health of late, we regret to state.

Mr. W. D. Holt, a former graduate and pupil of Chemawa, paid us a visit recently. He is now in the tailoring business in Yakima, Wash., and is doing well. We were pleased to have him with us even for a brief visit.

Paul F. Kissner of Portland was a guest at Chemawa not long ago and fell in love with the place. Mr. Kissner is one of the most noteworthy men in the United States in his special line as an expert violin maker, repairer, and authority on the authenticity of old instruments, and we were pleased to have him visit us.

Mr. Clardy returned home early this month from a trip to his childhood home in Kentucky, whither he had been called by sickness and death. While east he renewed many acquaintances of earlier days and notwithstanding the sorrow connected with his trip there were many pleasant features connected therewith.

Dr. John N. Steele, missionary for the Indian Service, recently passed a week at Chemawa, devoted to religious work. It goes without saying that Dr. Steele has become a prime favorite with our people, who esteem more and more his good intent and his ability. He has the good wishes of us all no matter where his lot is cast.

At Monday morning's chapel, May 4, Mr. M. L. Devol spoke to the students assembled on the subject of "Mexico." He depicted in a most graphic manner conditions at present prevailing in Mexico and the history of events leading to the present distressing disturbances in our sister republic. The effort was a most worthy one.

Mr. R. H. Kennedy addressed our general Sunday evening assembly on a recent date. He took for his subject "The Dallying With Conscience" from a character in Romola by George Elliott. Mr. Kennedy is always certain to interest his auditors and his talks are not only greatly appreciated, for looked forward to with eagerness.

On the evening of May 6 the people of Chemawa enjoyed a rare treat, afforded by a glimpse into the art world. Haig Arklin, painter of rare qualities and reader of unusual ability, combined his art in an exhibition for our benefit. It is useless for us to attempt a description of his many beautiful paintings, but we do proclaim Mr. Arklin a superb artist. His exposition of art was a real treat.
