THE COMING SCHOOL YEAR

Once more Chemawa's portals are ajar. Many new students have entered from various sections of our commonwealth and have settled down to routine business. Supt. Wadsworth is informed of many other young people who are expecting to arrive here shortly for enrollment. The school has a real mission; there is a reason for its existence and demand for its services; the efforts of its past have demonstrated its efficiency—all of this is generally recognized.

It is a grave responsibility that is ours, the education of youth. To form character, to open the mind to all of those fundamental principles which tend to foster reason and increase and perpetuate logic, is a work of which any individual may be proud. We desire that our students shall develop into real men and women, for then they will go out into the world and carve for themselves such a destiny as shall be a credit to themselves, their alma mater and every individual connected with it. May our greatest desire be realized.

Work in all lines, industrial and academic, is now on in full swing. We have an exceptionally good class of pupils and prospects for the coming school year are exceedingly bright. A good percent of these students come here with a purpose already conceived; they desire to perfect themselves along some particular line of work, and it goes without saying that these pupils make the utmost of the opportunities found here. A student with a purpose always has the best of it in any undertaking; therefore, we beseech all pupils to begin early in life to nurse a purpose.

The coming year will see the institution stronger than ever in many ways. It will offer more to those who enroll; it will be in a position to
