

one hundred exercises or copies and that it will take all year to complete the course. No more finger writing in the room, unless you are willing to be scolded and laughed at, too, by our teacher. On the first of each month specimens of our writing is taken and kept. In spite of the fact that we have written no small letters, marked improvement is noticed between the first and last specimens.

The eighth grade class learned with regret that Alexandria McLeod is soon to leave Riverside for Phoenix in order to improve her health. Alexandria would have been a member of our class had she remained. We wish to extend our sympathies and to assure her that she has our sincere wishes for her recovery. We should like to have her graduate with us next year.

We are always glad to have the members of the class of '14 visit us and from the number of times they have come we rather think they like to come. Eight of them are back to Chemawa, attending school in Salem, while one, Willie Reddie is studying music with Mr. Turney. Charles Eder and Ruth Liphart are taking business courses at Capitol City Business College, while Reginald Downie, William Service, Michael McLeod, Jerry Rees, Cora Zeigler and Lavina Wilbur are attending High School. We always give them books and are very particular to show them the place for we want them to know how much farther along we are now than they were last year at this time.

Our English teacher tells us that the new course of study prepared recently requires us to read four books and give two public recitations each year, and that the books are designated in the course of study. We will wager we can guess the first time who wrote that course of study. We like the old course better.

William Clark is doing all of the senior work and part of the eighth grade work.

THE TWO PACKS

Every boy and girl carries two packs, one in front, the other behind, and each is full of faults. But the one in front holds other boys and girls' faults, and the one behind his own. And so it is that boys and girls do not see their own at all, but see very clearly the faults of others.
