"This school costs the Government something like $112,000 a year, besides the improvements. Congress annually appropriates a sum equal to $167 for the maintenance of each pupil. That sum is supposed to pay all expenses of board, lodging, clothing, administration and incidentals of all sorts. Professor Wadsworth makes both ends meet—with a small surplus for betterments that the Government winks at and is glad to do so.

"Remember, there is a farm of 441 acres, about 300 acres being in cultivation. Remember, also, that it is about as fine a farm as lies out of doors—and none lie indoors. From this farm comes all the vegetables, fruit, milk and butter—about everything of the sort that usually comes from a farm save the grain for bread. The Government can buy flour cheaper than it can raise the wheat and have it ground. Last year there was put up 3400 half-gallon jars of preserves, jellies, jams and preserves, three tons of prunes were cured and placed on the shelves.

"The dairy herd soon will comprise 100 head of registered Holsteins. There are quite a number, some 24 head now, and Mr. Wadsworth thinks that in two years more he will have one of the finest herds in the West. A special appropriation of $9000 is available for a new dairy barn, which will be of the latest style. There were other appropriations of $5000 for repairs."

Another excerpt follows:

"Chemawa has one of the finest water systems and one of the best electrical plants in the state. This is in two units, each separate and distinct, each of 128-horsepower. The power is developed from crude oil. The water is pumped from a battery of deeply driven wells, which reach far down into the gravel. The tank is of the latest steel construction, is on a steel tower 100 feet high, and holds 500 barrels of water.

"No article about the Chemawa school would be nearly complete without mention of the band and the athletic stunts engaged in by the students. It is well known that the baseball, basketball, football and other athletic teams sent out from this school are not only game and skillful, but they are always and on every occasion commended for their manly actions on and off the field, while their prowess is attested to by several score of cups, trophies and medals hanging in the superintendent's office. As to the band, which has 40 pieces, it is one of the best in the state, and every Oregonian should be proud of it.

"Just a word about the manner of the dining-room conduct of the students. They eat together, boys and girls, in one large room, six at a table, about 100 tables. Usually a couple of the larger boys and a
