

beginning of the term was a pretty tough proposition, but later on a few veterans showed up. These strengthened things materially, but raw men had to be developed to fill vacant shoes. Material was scarce on first call for recruits, scarcely two teams appearing for outfits. These few though by steady practice and proper coaching developed into formidable players and can be counted on next year as veterans.

Speed was our mainstay, on account of our weight, and this was developed through a system of coaching of Mr. Hauser. "Basketball" football was used as a means of getting wind, while mutual football was used to a great extent in learning the finer points of the game. Both the first and second team men were provided with a training table at the Domestic Science Hall, and this of course, did much to develop their speed and good will, strength and hitting powers. Very few serious injuries were received, Colby being the only one, he having received a fractured rib in the early season. Downie at quarter played his usual good game and directed plays with tact and ability from that important post. Captain Peratrovitch at tackle, was there as usual with his winning smile and dangerous grin. Russell and Dick Adams at half and end, respectively, were the same old combination. Clyde Fields at guard was there with bells in every department, and Laue, the midget end, used the same old tactics with good effect. Peter Dick, a Cushman product, at tackle, showed up beautifully. George, from the same institution, loomed up very prominently in the line also and has a future. Frank Chamberlain, our little demon half back, surprised us immensely. Frank has been out of knickerbockers but a short time, but nevertheless performed like a "vet." Elk, the "let'er back" product, surprised many by his stellar work in the full back position and is considered a real find. Logan and Phillips, centers, are good men and will be looked to as prospective regulars next year. Colby, who received a fractured rib, was doing things around the end position when put out of the running. Bird, was a bird for sure, but entered a little late for any fame. He's from Montana.

Support was nominal and enthusiasm above the ordinary, but with a strong Athletic Organization visible in the distance, prospective members for next year's squad are full to the brim with "pep" for the coming season. In the meantime, basketball is claiming the attention of all aspirants and enthusiasts.

For various reasons, we were refused admittance to the Willamette Valley League organized in Portland two weeks ago, but nevertheless, Manager Frachtenberg and Coach Hauser are highly optimistic over the outlook for a successful season in every respect. Practice has been started in earnest and with Downie, Chamberlin, Adams, Colby, and other veterans in the line up, we can be counted on for a favorable showing.

From the girls' side we see rising a new spirit in the athletic line. Mrs. Willis has taken charge of all athletic activities for girls. While the boys were on the gridiron the girls were in the gym shooting baskets. Marian Minugh, Margaret Harney, Agnes Kiernan, Anna Loftus, Alice Keeley, Marian McClusky, Rose Simmons and Laura Squiqui are the bunch complete, so we can't help but feel that there will be quite a string of victories chalked up to our credit ere many weeks.
